Rules committee leaves three-point line alone

Meetings of the NCAA Men's and Women's Basketball Rules Committees April 24-26 in Scottsdale, Arizona, were marked more by action the committees did not take than changes they made.

Janice Shelton, chair of the women's committee and athletics director at East Tennessee State University, noted, "Women's basketball is in the best shape it has ever been. There is just no need for major changes."

George Raveling, chair of the men's committee and basketball coach at the University of Southern California, agreed. "The committee felt the state of the game was healthy," he said. "We have just completed one of the most exciting and successful seasons in recent years, and the men's committee simply did not see a reason to make a lot of changes."

The most significant "non-changes" in the men's rules were decisions to keep the three-point line at its current distance and to not reinstate the five-second closely guarded count on the dribbler.

"There was substantial discussion about the distance of the three-point line and the five-second count," Raveling said, "and while some sentiment was expressed for changing both, neither was approved."

The five-second count on the dribbler was eliminated a year ago, and the committee voted to keep the count out for another year.

In the women's rules, the 30-second shot clock and the absence of a 10-second backcourt count also were discussed but no changes were made.

"The shot clock was discussed specifically. The women have used

Views on eligibility standards sought

The NCAA Special Committee to Review Initial-Eligibility Standards is seeking comment and recommendations from the membership in advance of its May 31-June 1 meeting.

The special committee is responsible for recommending whether the Association should consider legislation to amend or delay 1992 Convention Proposal No. 16, which will take effect in August 1995 unless modified. That legislation will increase the initial-eligibility standards for prospective Division I student-athletes by requiring completion of 13 core courses (as opposed to 11) and achievement of a grade-point average and standardized test score that meet an index based on a 700 SAT score and a 2.500 GPA (4.000 scale).

Individuals in the membership interested in submitting written comments or recommendations to the committee may direct them to Ursula R. Walsh, NCAA director of research, at the national office (fax number 913/339-0035). To assure consideration by the committee, comments should be received no later than Wednesday, May 25.

Student committee discusses proposals

Legislative issues — including recommendations of the NCAA Special Committee to Study Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity — were the focus of the NCAA Student-Athlete Advisory Committee's April 22-23 meeting in New Orleans.

The committee, which generally supported the report containing preliminary recommendations by the special committee, will urge that group to change slightly its recommendation that legislation be sponsored requiring institutions and conferences to establish student-athlete advisory committees.

That legislation, if developed, instead should require only institutions to establish such committees, the committee suggested. Requiring conferences to develop advisory committees at this time would be costly and could hamper the proposal's chance of passing at the 1996 NCAA Convention, committee members believe.

"There's no doubt, the student-athletes on the committee were thinking financially," said Janet M. Justus, NCAA director of education

Court rules against Colorado drug policy

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled May 2 that random drug tests violated privacy rights of University of Colorado, Boulder, student-athletes, trainers, managers and cheerleaders.

The justices, without comment, left intact a Colorado Supreme Court ruling in the case that was filed in 1986, according to The Associated Press.

The school has not conducted random tests since an initial court ruling went against the university. The court action could hamper other state-run institutions' efforts to test athletes for drugs under programs that are different from the NCAA's.

Frank D. Uryasz, NCAA director of sports sciences, noted that this decision does not directly affect the NCAA's drug-testing program.

"The NCAA is a private entity whose programs are not subject to the Fourth Amendment search and seizure provisions," Uryasz said. "The effect of the decision on drug-testing programs at state-run institutions is left to be seen."

Earlier this year, the California Supreme Court ruled in favor of the NCAA program in a case brought by Stanford University student-athletes.

Colorado began a drug-testing program for student-athletes in

A weekly summary of major activities within the Association

Division I-A football

Research report complete; committee meets May 5-6

The first meeting of the NCAA Special Committee to Study a Division I-A Football Championship will be May 5-6 in Indian Wells, California.

The report upon which the group will base much of its discussion has been compiled by the research group that was appointed to study the pros and cons of a Division I-A football playoff. Charles E. Young, chancellor of the University of California, Los Angeles, chaired the research group and also will chair the special committee.

A second meeting of the Special Committee to Study a Division I-A Football Championship is planned for June 2-3 in Kansas City, Missouri. The committee will recommend for or against whether the Association's membership should consider legislation that would create a Division I-A football playoff.

For more information, see the April 20, March 23 and March 2 issues of The NCAA News.

Staff contact: Thomas W. Jernstedt.

Next meeting: May 5-6 in Indian Wells, California.

Student-athlete welfare

Council reviews report of special committee

The preliminary report of the Special Committee to Review Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity has been submitted to the NCAA Presidents Commission and Council. A final version is expected to be approved when the Council meets in August.

The preliminary report appeared on page 15 of the April 27 issue of The NCAA News.

Presidents Commission and Council members have been asked to comment on the preliminary recommendations contained in the report, and revisions will be made accordingly. Administrators at member institutions also are asked to review the draft.

The committee anticipates that its final report this summer will recommend several legislative proposals for the 1995 Convention, in addition to recommendations for various NCAA committees.

For more information, see the April 27 and April 13 issue of The NCAA News.

Proposal No. 174

Special committee to review initial-eligibility standards

The first — and perhaps only — meeting of the NCAA Special Committee to Review Initial-Eligibility Standards will be May 31-June 1 in San Francisco.

The committee is charged with a comprehensive review of initial-eligibility standards but especially with examining 1992 Convention Proposal No. 16, which is scheduled to go into effect in August 1995. The January 1995 Convention will be the last opportunity for the Association to amend or delay that legislation.

William B. DeLauder, president of Delaware State University, and Richard E. Peck, president of the University of New Mexico, are co-chairs of the special committee.

In a memorandum to members of the committee, DeLauder and Peck expressed

Regional seminars

First of three seminars is May 11-13 in San Francisco

The first of three regional rules-compliance seminars conducted by the NCAA membership services group will be May 11-13 in San Francisco.

The other 1994 seminars will be May 25-27 in Arlington, Virginia, and June 1-3 in New Orleans.

The seminars are designed to provide a continuing-education forum for Divisions I and II institutional and athletics administrators.

A schedule that applies for each of the seminars appeared on page 5 of the April 13 issue of The NCAA News.

The resource center, a popular feature introduced at the 1993 regional seminars, will be open again throughout the seminars.

The seminars will provide information about NCAA legislation and interpretations and will address the roles of various campus constituents in establishing and maintaining institutional control of intercollegiate athletics programs.

Revenues

Division II fund next in revenue-distribution plan

Checks from the Division II fund of the 1993-94 NCAA revenue-distribution plan will be mailed to Division II conferences and institutions May 20.

The first checks from the plan, paid from the basketball fund, were mailed last month. Basketball-fund checks totaling $31.5 million were mailed to Division I conference commissioners and selected athletics directors. The next payment for Division I members will be June 24, when the academic-enhancement fund is paid.

Six funds will be paid under the terms of the revenue-distribution plan over the next five months. The dates on which checks from the rest of the funds will be mailed are:

Division II May 20.
Academic enhancement June 24.
Special assistance July 29.
Sports sponsorship August 12.
Grants-in-aid August 26.

Review begins for candidates to head education services

A review of applicants for the position of NCAA group executive director for education services began April 29.

Although the review has begun, applications will continue to be accepted.

The group executive director for education services will supervise the directors of education resources, professional development, research, sports sciences and youth programs.

In a related development, Carrie A. Doyle has been appointed NCAA director of eligibility, replacing Janet M. Justus, who became NCAA director of education resources May 2. See page 12 for more information.

Ethics

Shelton to chair committee examining ethical behavior

The NCAA Presidents Commission has designated William E. Shelton, president of Eastern Michigan University, as chair of a special committee that will focus on "Integrity: Sportsmanship and ethical conduct," the 1996 topic for the Commission's strategic plan.

In April, the Presidents Commission mailed its report on ethical behavior to chief executive officers and athletics directors at member institutions. That report also appeared in full in the February 16 issue of The NCAA News.

Commission Chair Judith E. N. Albino noted that portions of the report contain recommendations of actions that the Commission believes should be taken by institutional officials, rules committees, coaches associations, and conference and official organizations. She noted, however, that other sections call for the membership to provide responses to the Commission before its June 28-29 meeting.

For more information, see the February 16 issue of The NCAA News.

Running shoes for the needy

Mark Lenker, a cross country and track and field student-athlete at Emory University, was wondering what to do with a growing pile of running shoes that he no longer could use. That's when an idea sprinted to the forefront: Give the shoes to the needy.

Lenker organized Emory's "Needy Feet Shoe Drive" and he got some of his teammates to pitch in their old shoes.

"I hate to see shoes lying around doing nothing when other people can use them," he said. "Running shoes still have some value as shoes, even after their cushioning for training is gone."

A total of 56 usable pairs of shoes were donated in the two-day event. The shoes were donated to the Atlanta Track Club's Shoe Project, an ongoing campaign that washes used shoes and delivers them to the Salvation Army, Grady Hospital and the Battered Women's Shelter in the Atlanta area.

"Mark put together a well-organized project," Emory track and field coach John Curtin said. "Recycling shoes is a neat idea, and I was amazed at the response. It was nice to see that so many people care."

Lenker says he may do more shoe drives in the future.

"This was a simple project to organize," he said. "It was a charity event, but it didn't cost money. All we wanted was old shoes. The reward for giving was a warm heart, and maybe some more free closet space."

Oh, what an inning!

Call it a scorekeeper's fantasy, or maybe nightmare. The second inning of an April 16 game between Monmouth College (New Jersey) and Mount St. Mary's College (Maryland) was a marathon.

Monmouth erupted for 19 runs in its half of the inning, sending 22 batters to the plate. It set an NCAA team record for runs batted in during one inning (18), and Mark Lenker put his foot down — for charity. Lenker organized the Emory University "Needy Feet Shoe Drive" and collected 56 usable pairs of shoes for various charities in the Atlanta area.

Doug Watson's three hits tied an NCAA individual record for hits in one inning.

The Hawks had back-to-back home runs by Brett Rackett and Watson in the inning in compiling 13 hits, three home runs and one double. They also had three batters hit by pitches, drew three walks and put down a sacrifice bunt.

Monmouth won the game, 21-4.

New school mascot

Fort Lewis College announced April 21 that "Skyhawk" will replace the "Raider" nickname that it dropped after 30 years (see Briefly in The News, April 13 issue of The NCAA News).

"The Skyhawk is a powerful image in flight — a symbol of our efforts to conduct our daily lives from the higher plane of vision and understanding," said Fort Lewis President Joel M. Jones. "It is often envisioned as a majestic symbol of freedom and the elevated human aspiration, around which our campus community — and especially our student-athletes — can rally."

Looking back

5 years ago: In testimony May 18, 1989, before the U.S. House Subcommittee on Postsecondary Education, NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz disputes charges that the NCAA membership is dealing only superficially with rules violations, academic problems and drug abuse in college athletics and says that "intercollegiate athletics...is under greater hands-on control by college leaders than at any time in this century." (The NCAA News, May 24, 1989)

10 years ago: A three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit (including current U.S. Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg) rejects claims by the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women that the NCAA violated Federal antitrust laws in offering governance and championships for women. (The NCAA News, May 23, 1984)

20 years ago: Meeting May 4, 1974, the NCAA Council adopts a resolution calling for the orderly development of women's intercollegiate athletics. ("NCAA: The Voice of College Sports")

40 years ago: The NCAA Council initiates a program requiring the chief executive officer of each member institution to certify that the institution is in compliance with NCAA rules. ("NCAA: The Voice of College Sports")

Fact file

The Association has budgeted $2.39 million for public relations and promotional activities — including such activities as highlights videos, sports polls, publications, production of championship broadcasts and marketing — during the 1993-94 fiscal year. Approximately 25 percent of those expenses are underwritten by official-ball contracts.

Nominations for committee vacancies due June 17

Administrative personnel at NCAA member institutions are invited to submit nominations by June 17 for upcoming vacancies on the NCAA Council, Executive Committee, general committees appointed by the Council, and sports committees.

The NCAA Nominating Committee will review nominations and make recommendations to fill NCAA officer and Council positions. The Men's and Women's Committees on Committees will consider candidates for sports committees. Sports committee members are elected by the annual Convention upon the recommendation of the Men's Committee on Committees and the Women's Committee on Committees.

The NCAA Council, at its pre-convention meetings in January, will appoint members of general committees in accordance with the provisions of NCAA Bylaws 21.1 and 21.3. Also, the Council will appoint members of the Executive Committee at its post-convention meeting.

While nominations will be accepted from anyone at an NCAA member institution or conference, customarily the director of athletics, faculty athletics representative, senior woman administrator of athletics programs, president or conference commissioner nominates personnel for service on NCAA committees.

As part of its commitment to diversity, the Association invites the nomination of ethnic minorities for committee positions. Such nominees are encouraged to include relevant information on the nominee forms they will receive after they are nominated.

The vacancies to be filled are for terms beginning September 1, 1995 (or, in the case of officers, Council, Executive Committee, or ex officio positions earmarked for Council members, for terms beginning in January 1995 immediately after the Convention). Committee members who are eligible for reelection are reelected automatically unless the committee recommends against it.

Legislation adopted by the January 1994 Convention now limits terms on general and sports committees to four years, with no immediate reelection; however, no one serving prior to the adoption of the new term limitations will serve for a shorter period than he or she would have served without adoption of the legislation. Compliance with new terms limits will be achieved through attrition.

Nominations must be submitted to Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, at the NCAA, 6201 College Boulevard, Overland Park, Kansas 66211-2422 (fax 913/339-0035), and must be received no later than June 17.

The nominee's name, title, institution, address, division, district and conference should be submitted. A separate nomination letter is to be provided for each candidate.

To be eligible for consideration, candidates then must complete a form providing information about qualifications. The national office will send the form to each nominee. A candidate's chances of appointment could be jeopardized if the form is not completed and returned by the deadline.

A complete list of NCAA officers, Council and Executive Committee members, and members of all standing committees may be found in the 1994 NCAA Committee Handbook, which was distributed to the membership in March. Committee changes that have occurred since publication of that booklet have been printed in the Committee Notices column in The NCAA News.

Council positions (Terms expire January 1995)

(Nominations will be considered by the NCAA Nominating Committee at its October 1994 meeting.)

Terms of three of the five elected NCAA officers will expire in January: President Joseph N. Crowley, University of Nevada; Secretary-Treasurer Prentice Gautt, Big Eight Conference, and Division II Vice-President Charles N. Lindemann, Humboldt State University.

Five Division I Council members' terms expire (one is eligible for reelection and four are not eligible); three Division II members cannot be reelected, and in Division III, one member may be reelected and three members must be replaced.

The Division II vice-president position must be filled by a member of the Council from the appropriate division.

A summary of the available Council positions follows:

Division I

Five expirations. One member is eligible for reelection. Four are not eligible for reelection.

Eligible for reelection: Dennis A. Farrell, Big West Conference (Division I-A conference representative). Not eligible: Warner Alford, University of Mississippi (I-A, Southeastern Conference); Doris R. Soladay, Syracuse University (I-A, Big East Conference); Patricia V. Viverito, Gateway Football/Missouri Valley Conferences (I, at large); Shirley A. Walker, Alcorn State University (I, at large).

Three of the Division I representatives elected or reelected must be from Division I-A conferences — the Southeastern Conference, to replace Alford; the Big East, to replace Soladay, and the Big West (Farrell is eligible for reelection). Two at large. At least three of those elected must be women.

Division II

Three expirations. Not eligible for reelection: Clint Bryant, Augusta College (Region 2); Charles N. Lindemann, Humboldt State University (Region 4); Harold J. McGee, Jacksonville State University (Region 2, chief executive officer). Two of those elected must be from Region 2 of Division II. One must be a chief executive officer (to replace McGee).

Division III

Three expirations. Not eligible for reelection: Dolores A. Bogard, State University College at Cortland (Region 2); Robert G. Bottoms, DePauw University (Region 3); John H. Harvey, Carnegie Mellon

CFA's membership controls its future

By Charles M. Neinas
COLLEGE FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION

The College Football Association television plan enjoyed a 12-year network run but will cease after the 1995 season. The Atlantic Coast Conference, expanded Big Eight Conference, Big East Conference and South-eastern Conference have entered into television agreements for football through the year 2000. The University of Notre Dame previously negotiated its own television arrangement in 1991, and Pennsylvania State University, which contracted with the CFA for football television through 1995, will become a part of the Big Ten Conference package in 1996.

Without question, the CFA attained notoriety and exposure as a result of its television program. What is frequently misunderstood, however, is that the organization was primarily established to provide a forum in which chief executive officers, faculty, administrators and coaches could discuss matters unique to major-college football.

It should be remembered that the CFA emerged in 1977 after efforts to reorganize the NCAA were unsuccessful. (It may be deja vu as the NCAA makes another attempt at restructuring.) When the CFA was initially formed, institutions sponsoring major-college football were frustrated by their inability to determine their own destiny through the NCAA voting process. Fortunately, the NCAA has subsequently undergone significant restructuring to the extent that Division I-A members (major football) have greater autonomy in voting on issues that impact upon the sport of football.

The CFA has been in the forefront in promoting legislation that its members believe benefit both football and intercollegiate athletics. Academic integrity has been paramount in the CFA's approach since its inception. The membership has often united to sponsor NCAA legislation to improve academic standards and encourage progress toward a degree. The CFA was instrumental in the development of Proposition 48, which requires satisfactory completion of a core curriculum in high school and a minimum SAT or ACT score for eligibility and financial aid as a freshman. The CFA membership also promoted the satisfactory-progress rule for all Division I members that requires a student-athlete to maintain eligibility in a degree-track program of study.

Prep coaches against clearinghouse

The Texas Girls Coaches Association, with more than 2,850 members and governed by a board that includes prep volleyball, basketball and track coaches, urges the elimination of the NCAA Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse.

The clearinghouse was implemented to eliminate duplication of effort for school counselors and to provide a single version of eligibility for prospective student athletes. TGCA coaches, however, have noticed little change regarding the incidence of recruiters' requests for pupil academic information.

Some high-school coaches have reported clearinghouse errors regarding athlete academic appraisals. In previous years, there have been occasional conflicting opinions regarding core requirements among NCAA institutions. Although clearinghouse mistakes typically have been corrected this year, the increased time allocation for the process of appeal counterbalances the few inter-institutional disputes of past years. Thus, the intended clearinghouse objective is not accomplished.

Furthermore, the $18 clearinghouse charge would be inherently unfair even if the aforementioned problems did not exist. Obviously, a significant number of fee payers will not receive scholarships. This is another reason for elimination of a well-intended reform that will provide revenue for the NCAA but little or no benefit to high-school personnel or, more importantly, student-athletes.

Mark Honea

Texas Girls Coaches Association

Editor's note: The question of whether prospective student athletes should pay the $18 fee to register with the clearinghouse continues to be a controversial part of the program. However, it is not a source of revenue for the NCAA, except in the sense that it helps offset the expenses of the clearinghouse. The NCAA contributes $500,000 annually to the program and pays the fee for those athletes who cannot afford it. The annual expense of operating the clearinghouse is estimated at $2.3 million.

□ Opinions

Model was a gentleman and a scholar

Terry Todd, commentator
National Public Radio

"Final exams are just a few weeks away here at the University of Texas and I am hip-deep in term papers. Many of the papers are by athletes, and what with the symposium (a recent symposium on ethics in athletics), I have really been preoccupied with these issues. I played a varsity sport myself, and I have always taken a particular interest in the academic success of the athletes I've had in my classes, and I've had hundreds through the years.

"Anyway, the symposium concluded that our system of big-time college sports has resulted in lots of marginal students being admitted just because of their athletic talent and that this had created a real problem.

"All of this made me remember my own days as a college athlete. I played tennis, and there were four main players on our team. All of us were serious about our tennis, but we were serious about our school work, too. We were student-athletes, a term I don't recall hearing back when I was one, but we weren't rich kids.

"Our parents were middle-class Texas folks who encouraged our interest in sports, and also in books. My coach was Dr. Daniel Penick, a professor of classics who had been the tennis coach here for over 50 years, more or less in his spare time. Recently, I have been reading some of Dr. Penick's correspondence from the 1920s, and it's filled with comments about how excited he was about the improved play of certain players, but even more excited about how well the players were doing in class.

"Dr. Penick used to say that he would never recruit a player, no matter how talented, who might not be able to practice for several hours a day and still make good grades. Dr. Penick was a cliché come to life—a gentlemen, and a scholar. I'll never forget how he used to look over on the sidelines after he finally retired, sitting upright, with a Greek text open in his lap in case the practice sessions began to bore him.

"Dr. Penick also directed the college glee club for years, and the choir at his church, and he played a sprightly game of tennis up into his 80s. He had a good record as tennis coach, too, with several national champions and Davis Cuppers to his credit. As for me and my teammates, we didn't win the national title, but two of us wound up with Ph.D.s, one became a lawyer and one a doctor.

"To the degree that universities can approach athletics in the way Dr. Penick approached athletics, I suspect they'll have a lot less problem with poor graduation rates, shady recruiting and all forms of cheating. What's more, universities won't have to feel so ashamed when their athletes perform so poorly in the hard game of life after they leave the heavily insulated world of college sports.

"People like Vince Lombardi and Al Davis and all their talk about winning is everything, and, 'Just win, baby,' are wrong. They're wrong. Dr. Penick was right."

Athletics values

Joel Stubblefield, president
Westark Community College
The Dallas Morning News

"Intercollegiate athletics is a plus only as long as it is moral-value based, operated by women and men of unimpeachable integrity and only as long as it builds on and actively supports the educational mission.

"Of late, they have become a liability of higher education across the country. That is not going to happen here if I can help it."

Coaching opportunities for Blacks

Ivan Maisel, columnist
The Sporting News

"One last note in reference to the Black Coaches Association and its drive to push its members into better college positions: The NFL continues to snap up qualified college assistants. Among the losses this winter: veterans Larry Kirksey of Alabama, who went to San Francisco, and Trent Walters of Texas A&M, who went to Minnesota.

"As long as minority hiring is an issue in the NFL, Division I-A schools will be caught in the middle. Few young African-Americans consider coaching because of a perceived bias in the industry. The ones who go into coaching and show any talent will have a chance to move quickly through I-A."

Pay for coaching women's sports

Leon Barmore, women's basketball coach
Louisiana Tech University
The Sporting News

"This game is not very old, and look how far we have come. The pay has got to get better, and it is getting better. But what you have to realize is that you can't snap your fingers and have everything change in one calendar year."

Sunday competition

Michael J. Clingenpeel, editorial writer
Religious Herald

Discussing the Big South Conference's $300,000 lawsuit against Campbell University that is rooted in the refusal of Campbell — a Baptist institution — to compete on Sundays:

"Sports, because they command inordinate attention in our society, particularly need to become an arena for clearly enunciated and fleshed-out principles. Sports mean television and money, a duo that create a vacuum capable of sucking in, chewing up and swallowing athletes and principles.

"Recently, I watched my son's county league basketball team lose a heartbreaker by one point on two last-second free throws by the opposing team's star player. A league rule states that all players should play an equal number of minutes. But the coach, against league rules, played his star (also his son) all but a few minutes of the game in order to win. What principle did the coach teach his players? That winning is more important than playing by a set of rules.

"Living by a set of rules, especially God's, is not always delightful, and never easy. The lines drawn by principles are not always clear, and often require judgment. Principles are purchased at a price. Often the applause one hears for sticking to principles is the solitary, lonely clapping of one's inner self.

"Time will tell how much Campbell will pay for its principles. But right now, the figure could be $300,000. It is a small price to pay...."

Military players join the ranks of collegiate golf

By Gary T. Brown
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

Sophomore George Katsoudas doesn't turn many opponents' heads when he wanders toward the first hole during Fayetteville State University golf tournaments.

That is, not until the 44-year-old underclassman tees off.

"When I go to tournaments," he said, "everybody calls me coach — until I start playing with them. Then they look at me like I'm really weird."

Katsoudas is neither weird nor an anomaly. He is one of a handful of current collegiate golfers who have retired from military service and returned to school with the help of the G.I. Bill and scholarship assistance from schools that otherwise might not be able to offer a full grant-in-aid.

The pairing seems to be a natural. Katsoudas, teammate Larry Juarez, 49-year-old Robert Parker of South Carolina State University and 43-year-old Donald Reid of Hampton University are among those who have helped their teams excel on the course in exchange for the opportunity to excel in the classroom.

Found a way to play

"We didn't just want to give up golf," said Parker, who was the medalist at South Carolina State's O. C. Dawson Invitational in early April. "We wanted to find a way to be able to play the same level of competition and spend the same amount of time with the game. Plus the educational aspect, plus the financial aspect — the scholarship was icing on the cake."

Parker learned the game as a caddie in Charlotte, North Carolina, while growing up near the same course where professional golfer Charlie Sifford played. After high school, he was offered an opportunity to play golf at Livingstone College, but as Parker said, "golf wasn't that big at small black schools back then." He opted for a career in the military, where he was able to, among other things, hone his golf skills.

"I had watched him play in some tournaments and I knew he was pretty good," said Parker's current coach at South Carolina

He's not your average student-athlete, but 49-year-old Robert Parker of South Carolina State University is one of a handful of retired military servicemen to hit college campuses — and golf courses — with the help of the G.I. Bill and some financial assistance from their schools.

State, Sam Blacknall. "He had talked about what he wanted to do when he got out of the military, and I asked him about going back to college. He's been a great asset to me because he's a good teacher of the game and he's very patient. He's really an extra coach for me."

Parker and the others were able to package their pursuit of an education with varsity golf competition because of NCAA Bylaw 14.2.4.5, which exempts competition during military service from counting against a student-athlete's eligibility. And the additional financial benefit from the G.I. Bill helps schools give these players the opportunity without compromising the conventional student-athlete.

A way to compete

"I'm trying to get the conventional golf student-athlete," said Raymond McDougal, golf coach at Fayetteville State, "but if the money doesn't work out, then you have to weigh it financially according to each situation. The caliber of conventional golfer we recruit also is being recruited by other schools. We may not be able to offer that student-athlete what he can get elsewhere. We just have to put together the best offer we can and hope to get guys who can play and who fit into our budget."

Fitting in at all could have been a challenge for a player twice the age of his teammates, but Parker figured he had a head start in knowing what to expect.

"Having kids older than they are, I already knew the flexibility was more my responsibility than theirs," he said. "I knew different sides of young people and I worked my way in with them. I didn't go away from the father figure completely, but I blended in with them as a friend."

"It's actually tougher on him than it is on the other guys," Blacknall said. "He posted a 4.000 (grade-point average) his first semester and told me, 'Coach, don't show my grades to the rest of the guys.' That's the kind of guy he is — he's a great person around the kids. He doesn't have too many bad habits."

The only habit Blacknall would change, if he could, would be Parker's propensity for one-handed chips.

Unorthodox chips

"He's kind of unorthodox with his chips," he said. "When he's inside of 50 yards or so from the green, he'll chip using just one hand. If he were a younger player, I think I'd try to change him on that one."

For now, Blacknall is content to let Parker's chips fall where they may.

He's been one of South Carolina State's top three players throughout the season. Similarly, Katsoudas and Juarez fill two of the top three slots at Fayetteville State and Hampton coach Burl Bowens lists Reid as his No. 2 player.

Looking to military players also has proven to be an effective way of increasing minority participation in a sport traditionally dominated by white student-athletes. Parker said there are many more minorities in the military who play the game well and who realize the need for a quality education in today's job climate.

"I think coaches are starting to look for these kinds of guys," he said. "I've had coaches ask me if I have any other buddies out there. You probably wouldn't want a whole team of guys like us, but maybe one on a team would be helpful to the younger players."

"This is one way we can bridge the gap and encourage minorities to play," said Blacknall. "Not many minorities are able to play golf at an early age. Robert is the kind of guy who will help us attract better golfers."

Game needs advocates

Parker thinks that it is time for those minorities who do play to become advocates of the sport.

"Minority participation probably won't advance without the people in the limelight now giving it a push," he said. "It seems hard to get young Blacks interested in the sport. It's hard to get people in my generation to promote the sport as well. But without us being proactive, I see it as something we'll be letting slip away."

Parker hopes to be able to promote golf through coaching, once he obtains his degree.

"I think I'd rather coach than play on the Senior Tour," he said. "I enjoy teaching young people. It (golf) gets them off the street and the game requires a lot of self-discipline. I'd like to see as many kids as possible take up the game just for the mental aspect."

CFA

Future of the football organization rests in the hands of its membership

Through the CFA, college football coaches gained a voice and the opportunity to work with chief executive officers, faculty representatives and athletics directors in formulating legislation to aid the sport. The idea of a recruiting calendar, which subsequently was adopted by the NCAA for other sports as well as football, originated with the CFA coaches group.

The calendar reduced off-campus recruiting from more than 200 days to less than eight weeks. Also, the elimination of outside interests (alumni and boosters) from the recruiting process was a result of CFA-sponsored legislation.

Misconception about TV

Through the years, there has been a misconception as to how the CFA became involved in television. The organization initially appointed a committee to study the NCAA television plan at a time when the NCAA was in the process of negotiating an extension.

It generally was agreed that the NCAA television plan was unduly restrictive and football-generated revenue was credited as rights fees to other NCAA championships and to underwrite unrelated services. Basically, only games that were selected to be a part of the NCAA television plan gained television exposure.

In fact, Justice John Paul Stevens, writing for the majority in the Supreme Court decision in the case involving the University of Oklahoma Regents, et al., vs. the NCAA, stated that a major shortcoming of the NCAA television plan was its insensitivity to viewer preference. Also, it should be noted that the plan was voted upon by all NCAA members, including those that did not sponsor a football team.

Subsequently, the CFA developed a $180 million, four-year television contract with NBC that would have guaranteed each CFA member a minimum of $1 million and two television exposures. It also would have provided 10 to 12 prime time exposures for college football on the network starting with the 1982 season.

The NCAA Council ruled, however, that any CFA member that would participate in such an agreement would be in violation of NCAA rules and thereby prohibited from participating in postseason competition involving both men's and women's sports. The NCAA contended that as an obligation of membership, a member automatically awarded its football television rights to the NCAA.

Subsequent challenge

The position was subsequently challenged on the theory that the individual universities owned the rights to their football team's games, not the NCAA. The CFA contract with NBC was never implemented and litigation proceeded through the courts until the ruling by the Supreme Court in June 1984 that upheld the property rights theory and found the NCAA in violation of the antitrust laws.

Subsequently, the CFA has represented those members that voluntarily committed to participate in a television plan commencing in 1984. An important feature of the CFA television plan is its flexibility that enables institutions to make arrangements to televise games on their own or as part of a conference package beyond what appears on network television.

The CFA television plan served its members well, but there is nothing more constant in life than change. As a result of the Southeastern Conference decision to accept an offer from CBS, as opposed to the extension agreement negotiated by the CFA Television Committee with ABC and ESPN, it became apparent that a majority of CFA members should proceed to negotiate television arrangements under the auspices of various conferences. It is appropriate for institutions to determine how to sell or assign the television rights to their team's games.

The CFA has been successful in satisfying the basic objectives of the organization as enunciated in its Articles of Association. Through the years, the CFA has expanded its services and has become involved in a variety of projects, including the promotion of football. As to the future, the membership will have the opportunity to make a determination as to the continuing viability of the CFA.

Charles M. Neinas is executive director of the College Football Association. This commentary first appeared in Sidelines, the CFA publication.

Division I Men's Lacrosse

Syracuse leads big field of contenders

Event: 1994 Division I Men's Lacrosse Championship.

Overview: Defending champion Syracuse defeated 1993 runner-up North Carolina, 17-10, in the season opener and has lost only at Johns Hopkins, 19-14. The Tar Heels didn't look like contenders after the Syracuse loss, dropping two of their next three, but they went on to win eight of their next nine and avenged their only loss of that streak by beating Virginia, 15-7, to claim the Atlantic Coast Conference championship. Princeton, which won its first and only championship in 1992, seems to have solidified itself as a perennial contender. The Tigers, led by all-American goalkeeper Scott Bacigalupo, have yet to yield double figures in a game, and their only loss was to Brown, 7-6. Loyola (Maryland) won its first eight games, including a 14-12 triumph over North Carolina, before bowing to Syracuse, 16-10.

Field: Twelve-team, single-elimination tournament. One team is selected from each of three geographical regions. The remaining teams are selected at large.

Dates and sites: First-round and quarterfinal games are May 14 and 21 at on-campus sites. The semifinals and championship are May 28 and 30 at Maryland.

Results: First-round scores will be published in the May 18 issue of The NCAA News. Scores from quarterfinals will be in the May 25 issue. Championship results will be published in the June 1 issue.

Television coverage: CBS will air highlights of the championship game at 5 p.m. (Eastern time) June 18. Prime Network will air live telecasts of the semifinals, beginning at noon (Eastern time) May 28. The second game will start at 3 p.m. or 45 minutes after the conclusion of the first game.

All-American goalie Scott Bacigalupo leads Princeton.

Championship notes: Syracuse has won three of the last six championships. Either the Orangemen, North Carolina or Johns Hopkins has won every year since 1978, with one exception — Princeton's 1992 crown.... This is the first time the championship has been held at the same site two consecutive years.

What they are saying

Bill Tierney, head coach Princeton

"Syracuse has got to be considered the favorite. They tend to have a different style than most of the other teams. But there are five other teams, including us, that are pretty even, and it's going to be among all of us. That's good for the game."

Division II Men's Lacrosse

Springfield holds top ranking

Event: 1994 Division II Men's Lacrosse Championship.

Overview: Top-ranked Springfield has lost only to unbeaten New York Tech, 14-9. The Chiefs own a 6-5 victory over 1993 runner-up Long Island-C. W. Post, which also has lost only to Division I Vermont and Division III powerhouse Nazareth (New York). The Pioneers have a showdown with Division II power New York Tech before closing the season against two Division I teams, Harvard and Towson State.

Field: Two teams will be selected for the championship.

Date and site: The title game will be played May 14 or 15 on the campus of one of the competing institutions.

Results: A report on the championship game will be published in the May 18 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: Current NCAA legislation that requires 40 division members for a championship to continue will result in discontinuation of the Division II championship after 1995. Division II currently has 26 sponsoring institutions. Last year was the first Division II championship since 1981. The intent of the legislation was to prevent Divisions I and II institutions from classifying programs in Division III.

What they are saying

Keith Bugbee, head coach Springfield

"Our loss against New York Tech came early, which I think has helped us. Since then we have played a lot better as a team and made a nice run for the No. 1 spot. We were 12-4 last year, but our wins this year are against higher-quality teams."

Tom Postel, head coach Long Island-C. W. Post

"We've played a strong schedule, and I think that should help us at selection time. We were perceived to be No. 1 because we beat Adelphi (last year's champs) early before Springfield beat us, but a few teams have beaten Adelphi since then, so you can't tell much from the polls."

Dan Riordan (right) and Long Island-C.W. Post are aiming for a national title. But the Pioneers, who finished second last season, might have their hands full with Springfield, which is top-ranked and has lost only to unbeaten New York Tech.

Division III Men's Lacrosse

Salisbury State appears ready to take big step in Division III title contention Event: 1994 Division III Men's Lacrosse Championship.

Overview: Salisbury State has made it to the championship game only once in the tournament's 14-year history and has never won, but this year may be the Sea Gulls' best chance yet. They were undefeated through their first 10 games, but beat only two top-10 teams. The Gulls, however, answered all questions by blasting perennial powerhouse Nazareth (New York) from the unbeaten ranks, 21-2. Coach Jim Berkman's team has scored 20 or more goals seven times in 12 games and held the opposition to fewer than 10 goals nine times. History shows, however, that to be Division III champion, a team has to beat Hobart somewhere along the way. As usual, that will be no easy task. The Statesmen, who will move to Division I next year, had played only one Division III game — a 17-13 victory over third-ranked Gettysburg — in their first eight games and were 5-2 against Division I opponents.

Field: Eight-team, single-elimination tournament. The eight berths are awarded on the basis of the historical strength of regions, the number of teams that have been selected for the championship from each region and the number of institutions sponsoring men's lacrosse in each region.

Dates and sites: The quarterfinals will be May 15 at on-campus sites. The semifinals are May 22 on campuses. The championship game is May 29 at Maryland.

Results: Scores from quarterfinals matches will be in the May 18 issue of The NCAA News. Scores from semifinals will be in the May 25 issue. Championship results will be in the June 1 issue.

Championship notes: This is the third year the championship has been held at the same site as the Division I championship game. Last year's Division III title game drew 9,597 fans — the most to attend any Division III championship in any sport....Hobart, which will move to Division I next year, has won every championship since 1980, with the exception of 1992, when Nazareth (New York) downed the Statesmen.

What they are saying

Jim Berkman, head coach Salisbury State

"To me, Hobart is the favorite regardless of where we are ranked. A lot of people in coaching know that. They have quite a run going that some people have overlooked, but they beat Gettysburg and a couple of days later beat Duke, which had just beaten Virginia, so they should probably be No. 1, not us."

Gettysburg will rely in part on Brett Smith, an honorable-mention all-American pick last year.

National Collegiate Women's Lacrosse

Atlantic Coast teams remain threats

Event: 1994 National Collegiate Women's Lacrosse Championship.

Overview: Loyola (Maryland) was cruising with a 15-0 record until it ran into two Atlantic Coast Conference powers — defending champion Virginia, which left Baltimore with a 12-9 victory, and 1992 champion Maryland, which ran its record to 9-0 with an 11-5 win on the Greyhounds' home turf. Princeton, last year's runner-up, also appears to be a contender, having defeated its first 12 opponents — including a 15-14 overtime victory over Virginia. Virginia's only other loss was in a 5-1 defensive battle with the Terrapins.

Tara Kramer is the leading scorer for Loyola (Maryland).

Field: Six teams will be selected at large for a single-elimination tournament.

Dates and sites: First-round games will be played May 14 at campus sites. The semifinals and championship will be played May 21 and 22 at Maryland.

Results: Championship results will be published in the May 25 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: An Atlantic Coast Conference team has won the last three championships — Virginia in 1991 and 1993 and Maryland in 1992. The 1986 Terrapins are the only other ACC team to take the title since the championship began in 1982....The past two title games have gone into overtime. None had gone beyond regulation before 1992.

What they are saying

Chris Sailer, head coach Princeton

"(Our wins in close games) have given us confidence that no matter what the situation is, we can pull a game out. Our goal is to make the championship game again and win it, and we have worked hard — one game at a time — in order to put ourselves in position to do that."

Jane Miller, head coach Virginia

"One of the teams that goes to the tournament probably is going to be undefeated and that hasn't happened for a while. We set our sights on being in the hunt at the beginning of the year, and I hope we are in position to defend our title."

Division III Women's Lacrosse

Pair of teams to challenge finalists

Event: 1994 Division III Women's Lacrosse Championship.

Overview: The usual suspects, Trenton State and William Smith, are on the title contenders' scene, but they are joined by two teams that have never made it to the championship game — Middlebury and Johns Hopkins. Middlebury, which has yet to surrender more than nine goals in a match, handled its first 10 opponents, although only one was ranked in the top 15. Trenton State, which didn't lose last season, extended its streak by winning its first 10 games, including five victories against top-15 teams. William Smith completed an unbeaten regular season, downing top-15 Ursinus and Ithaca in the process. Johns Hopkins also remained unbeaten with three games to play. The Blue Jays have allowed double-figure goals only once.

Field: Eight-team, single-elimination tournament. At least one team will be selected from each of five regions, with the remaining five to be selected at large.

Dates and sites: First-round games will be played at on-campus sites May 14. The semifinals and championship will be played May 21 and 22 at Maryland.

Results: Championship results will be published in the May 25 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: Trenton State has won five championships, followed by Ursinus with three. No other team has won since the tournament began in 1985....Last year's runner-up, William Smith, has finished second three times.

Rebecca Savage and Johns Hopkins are hoping to make it to the championship game for the first time. The Blue Jays were undefeated with three games to play.

What they are saying

Sally Anderson, head coach Johns Hopkins

"We set three goals at the beginning of the season: Go 10-0 and win the conference; finish the regular season 15-0, and win the championship and finish 18-0. We've won the conference, so we've taken the first step. Our kids are excited about our chances."

Division III Men's Tennis

Tournament offers major opportunity for contenders

Event: 1994 Division III Men's Tennis Championships.

Overview: There probably is no dominant team in this year's championships field. At least four teams and as many as seven have a legitimate shot at the team title. Three-time defending champion Kalamazoo is among those contenders, as are four-time runner-up UC Santa Cruz, Claremont-Mudd-Scripps, host Redlands and Washington (Maryland), just to name a few. Kalamazoo, with returnees Seth Denawetz and Ryan Kaltenbach, may be a slight favorite for no other reason than the fact that the Hornets have won the last three team titles. UC Santa Cruz, which won the 1989 title, should be in the running again. Coach Bob Hansen's squad is led by Ron Ward, Jonathan Harper and Dave Muldawer. Claremont-Mudd-Scripps, in search of its first team title, will rely on a squad led by Tim Cooley, who teamed with Ryan McKee to claim the 1993 doubles title, and Tran Nguyen. The dark-horse team, if any, is Washington (Maryland), which is led by Stephan Berger, Miroslav Beran and Carlos Nuno.

Field: The team-championship field will include 12 teams; 64 singles players and 32 doubles teams will make up the individual-championships field. Two teams from each of four regions (East, Midwest, South, West) will receive automatic berths; the remaining four teams will be selected at large. The individual-championships field will include three singles players and two doubles teams from teams seeded Nos. 1 through 4; three singles players and one doubles team from teams seeded Nos. 5 through 8, and two singles players and one doubles team from teams seeded Nos. 9 through 12. The remaining 32 singles players and 16 doubles teams will be selected at large.

Dates and site: Redlands will serve as host for the championships May 16-23. The team championship will be May 16-19 and the individual championships will be May 20-23.

Results: Championships results will appear in the May 25 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Redlands is hosting its first championships....Kalamazoo has won the most team (seven) and singles (five) championships....Gustavus Adolphus has claimed the most doubles titles (four)....Claremont-Mudd-Scripps has won the last two doubles crowns....UC Santa Cruz has finished first or second at six consecutive championships. The Banana Slugs won the 1989 title.

What they are saying

Bob Hansen, head coach UC Santa Cruz

On the Banana Slugs' finishing as runner-up four consecutive years:

"One of the things we're guarding against is the feeling of feeling snakebit. We've played some very good teams; and last year, for example, I was so proud of our guys for getting (to the final). We're trying to avoid pressing too hard, trying to do things we're not capable of. We want to play the way we do all season long."

Tim Cooley and teammate Ryan McKee of Claremont-Mudd-Scripps won the doubles title last year. It was the second consecutive doubles title for the Slugs, who are in search of their first team title. They are among several teams with a shot at the crown.

Division I Women's Tennis

Longhorns no underdog this season

Event: 1994 Division I Women's Tennis Championships.

Overview: A year ago, Texas became the lowest-seeded team (No. 5) to win the team title. This year, Texas likely will enter the championships ranked No. 1, and deservedly so. Undefeated in 19 matches through April 12, the Longhorns are both deep and experienced. Jackie Moe, Kelly Pace and Jill Craybas are the top returnees from last year's championship team. Add newcomers Lucie Ludvigova, a Division II singles champion in 1993 at Grand Canyon and the nation's top-ranked Division I singles player for much of this season, and freshman Farley Taylor, and it's clear why the Longhorns are favored to win their second team championship. However, Texas has strong challengers: host Georgia, California, Florida, Stanford, UCLA and Duke.

Field: The tournament will consist of team and individual championships. The team competition will include 20 teams, while the individual championships will include 64 singles players and 32 doubles teams. The team-championship field will include one team from each of six regions (Central, East, Midwest, Southeast, Southwest and West) receiving automatic berths and 14 teams selected at large. The singles and doubles competitors also will be selected at large; however, to obtain regional representation, a minimum of four singles players and two doubles teams will be selected from each region. No more than six singles players and three doubles teams will be selected from one institution.

Dates and site: The championships will be May 13-21 at Georgia. The team championship will be May 13-17; singles and doubles play will be May 18-21.

Television coverage: The championships' singles and doubles finals will be broadcast live May 21 by Primesportschannel (NCAA Productions). The singles event will be at 10 a.m. (Eastern time) and the doubles final will be at 9:30 p.m.

Results: Championships results will appear in the May 25 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Stanford has won the most team (eight), singles (seven) and doubles (three) titles.

What they are saying

Jeff Wallace, head coach Georgia

"I think a lot of people are excited about coming to Athens, to a site that has a lot of tradition in college tennis. We're very excited to be hosting the event, but we're also keeping things in perspective. If you look at the past, only one host team (Stanford in 1991) has won the event on the women's side."

Division I Men's Tennis

Southern California, Stanford ready

Event: 1994 Division I Men's Tennis Championships.

Overview: Southern California and Stanford have combined to win the last six team titles — Stanford has won four. The duo again should battle for supremacy. For the fourth consecutive year, the Trojans are likely to enter the championships ranked No. 1. They also are the nation's top-ranked team despite losing four all-Americans from last year's championship team. Winners of two of the last three team championships, the Trojans showcase the talents of Wayne Black, Jon Leach, Brett Hansen and Adam Peterson, among others. But a Southern California title won't come easily. The Cardinal, ranked No. 2, was victorious in 16 of its first 17 matches.

Field: Regional-qualifying tournaments will be played at eight sites and include a minimum of four and a maximum of six teams. The eight regional winners, along with eight other selected teams, will advance to the championships site. In addition to the 16 teams, there will be 64 singles players and 32 doubles teams in the championships field. Sixty-eight players in singles and doubles, in addition to 128 players (eight players from each team) participating in the team championship, will be included in the individual-championships field. Each region will nominate four singles players and two doubles teams for the individual championships.

Dates and sites: Regional-qualifying tournaments will be May 13-15 at eight sites — Region I: Harvard; Region II: South Carolina; Region III: to be determined; Region IV: Notre Dame; Region V: Wichita State; Region VI: to be determined; Region VII: New Mexico, and Region VIII: UCLA. The championships will be May 21-29 at Notre Dame. The team championship will be May 21-24, while the singles and doubles championships will be May 25-29.

Television coverage: The championships will be broadcast live by ESPN at 1:30 p.m. (Eastern time) May 29.

Results: Championships results will appear in the June 1 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Pacific-10 Conference schools have won 41 team titles. UCLA has won 15, Southern California 14 and Stanford 12.

What they are saying

Dick Leach, head coach Southern California

"I figured this year would be a tough year — we lost four all-Americans from last year — but our record at this time is better than it was last year. Who's to say this year's team can't do the same thing (as last year's)?"

Division II Men's Tennis

Defending champion Lander now known in II

Event: 1994 Division II Men's Tennis Championships.

Overview: Last year, Lander surprised some people by bursting onto the NCAA Division II championships scene and claiming its first team title. Lander won't surprise anyone this year, but it's not likely foes can stop the Senators from winning their second consecutive crown. Bolstered by returnees Brett Simpson, Lee Holyoak and Alex Lindholm, coach Joe Cabri's team is ranked No. 1 in Division II and favored to successfully defend its title. Lindholm, who missed a portion of the 1993 campaign (including the championships) because of a back injury, is the Senators' No. 1 singles player and has been ranked near the top of the singles rankings for much of the season. Hampton, runner-up the past two years, and Rollins, which finished third a year ago, are the top challengers to Lander's crown. Hampton is led by William Ball and Roberto Cavalcante. In addition to being Hampton's top singles players, Ball and Cavalcante form the nation's top doubles tandem. Rollins, which won the 1991 title, is paced by Jon Goldfarb, Jim Powers and Ramon Tessler. Cal Poly San Luis Obispo and Elon also should battle for top-five positions.

Field: The championships field will include eight teams, 64 singles players and 32 doubles teams. The team championship will include two teams selected from each of four regions (East, Midwest, South and West). A maximum of 34 players in singles and doubles, as well as seven players from each selected team, will make up the individual-championships field. Each of the four regions is guaranteed one singles player and one doubles team.

Dates and sites: The championships will be May 13-19 at the Carriage Club and Homestead Club in Kansas City, Missouri; Southwest Baptist will serve as host. The team championship will be May 13-15; the individual championships will be May 16-19.

Results: Championships results will appear in the May 25 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Southern Illinois-Edwardsville has won the most team (seven), singles (seven) and doubles (five) championships....Hampton has finished as runner-up at four of the last seven team championships.

What they are saying

Joe Cabri, head coach Lander

"I felt last year that the competition (in the championships) was very strong. I don't see it being any weaker this year. In fact, it will probably be a little stronger. I think we have a good team, but we're going to have to play our best to beat the other teams out there. If we don't play well, we could very easily lose."

Brett Simpson and Lander are hoping to retain their No. 1 ranking — and their Division II team title.

Division II Men's Golf

Five teams all have legitimate shot

Event: 1994 Division II Men's Golf Championships.

Overview: A shootout is expected among Columbus, Florida Southern and Cal State Stanislaus; host North Florida and South Carolina-Aiken are among other challengers. Columbus returns Martin Lonardi, who finished second last year and tied for third in 1992. Florida Southern features 1993 all-Americans Dan Konieczny and Chad Lucovsky. North Florida, a former National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics member competing for the first time in Division II, joins the hunt, despite losing four seniors from last year's squad.

Field: A total of 90 participants from eight districts will compete for the team and individual championships.

Dates and site: The championships will be May 17-20 at Queen's Harbour Yacht & Country Club, Jacksonville, Florida. North Florida will serve as the host institution.

Results: Championships results will appear in the May 25 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: The championships return to Florida after being held in California last year for the first time since 1979....North Florida is accustomed to hosting championships; it hosted the NAIA nationals last year....Columbus has finished either first or second in seven of the past eight championships....Florida Southern's six team championships leads the field. The Moccasins posted back-to-back championships in 1981-1982, 1985-1986 and 1990-1991.

What they are saying

Charley Matlock, head coach Florida Southern

"There are five teams among which there's very little difference — us, Columbus, South Carolina-Aiken, Cal State Stanislaus and North Florida. I think Columbus has the two best and most consistent players in Mark Immelman and Martin Lonardi. We have four pretty solid players, but in order to win championships, you've got to have a guy who's individually superior enough to make a difference."

John Brooks, head coach
North Florida

"There's a lot of parity in the top 10. I would rank Columbus and South Carolina-Aiken as the favorites, with Florida Southern as a close third. We've gotten better as the year's gone on. We had a lot of new players, and it's taken some time for us to get acclimated."

Lance Johnson of Cal State Stanislaus won last year's individual title.

Division III Men's Golf

Favored Methodist to play at home

Event: 1994 Division III Men's Golf Championships.

Overview: Methodist, hosting the championships for the first time, is favored to win its fourth title in five years. UC San Diego, last year's champion, will challenge the Monarchs with four golfers returning from last year's squad. Methodist features last year's medalist, Ryan Jenkins, a junior who boasts a 74.4 stroke average in 21 rounds this year. Sophomore Jamie Hurless won Ohio Wesleyan's Dick Gordin Invitational, one of the most prestigious annual tournaments in Division III. Methodist took the team title in that event by 39 strokes, but UC San Diego was not in the field. Binghamton, which finished fourth last year, also could contend.

Field: A total of 120 participants from six districts will compete for the team and individual championships.

Dates and site: The championships will be May 17-20 at King's Grant Country Club, Fayetteville, North Carolina. Methodist will serve as the host institution.

Results: Championships results will appear in the May 25 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: UC San Diego, on its home course, derailed Methodist's search for a fourth consecutive team championship last year. It was the first time a host institution won the team title....Cal State Stanislaus, which now competes in Division II, has the most Division III team championships with 12. Methodist is the only other school with more than one....King's Grant Country Club is home to professional golfer Chip Beck, a Fayetteville native.

What they are saying

Steve Conley, head coach Methodist

"We're having another great year. We've got the best stroke average we've ever had. Of course, I said that last year, too, and we lost, so I don't know how much stock that holds. This is the fifth straight year that we've been ranked No. 1 in the coaches poll going into the tournament, though in my mind, UC San Diego should be No. 1 because nobody has beaten them. Binghamton also has had a great year, along with Otterbein, Nebraska Wesleyan and Wisconsin-Eau Claire."

He's only a junior, but Methodist's Ryan Jenkins already is in position to win his second individual title. Jenkins has a 74.4 stroke average in 21 rounds this season. Methodist, which is hosting the championship this year, will be going for its fourth title in five years. The Monarchs will get a strong challenge from UC San Diego, last year's champion.

Division II Women's Softball

Expanded field still features usual title contenders

Event: 1994 Division II Women's Softball Championship.

Overview: The championship's bracket has changed from 16 to 24 teams, but the top contenders remain the same. Augustana (South Dakota), runner-up a year ago; Florida Southern, the defending champion; Cal State Bakersfield, and Bloomsburg again rank as the top teams in Division II. Augustana (South Dakota) is the nation's No. 1-ranked team. The Vikings, who sport a 44-3 record, boast the nation's finest pitching staff with seniors Signe DeJong and Julie Krauth and sophomore Siri Johnson. The trio has compiled a minuscule earned-run average of 0.69, and DeJong and Krauth have combined to win 36 of 38 decisions — DeJong is 21-1. Offensively, the Vikings are paced by Angie Hopkins (.488 batting average, nine home runs and 55 runs batted in), Traci Mescher (.433), Paula U'Ren (.380, 10 HR and 42 RBI) and Krauth (.396, 39 RBI). Florida Southern, in search of its second consecutive title, is led offensively by returnees Shelly Davis and Patty Fleig, both of whom are hitting better than .400. Cal State Bakersfield, ranked No. 2, looks to return to the winners' circle after a three-year absence.

Field: The championship provides for a field of 24 teams. Four teams will compete at each of six regional sites to determine the final six participants. All regionals employ a double-elimination format. Six conferences are granted automatic qualification. The remaining teams will be selected at large. The Division II subcommittee of the NCAA Women's Softball Committee will select four teams each from the Northeast, Mid-Atlantic, Central, Midwest, South and West regions.

Dates and sites: Teams will be selected for the championship May 9. Regional competition will be May 13-14 at on-campus sites. The finals will be May 19-22 at the Johnson County Girls Athletic Association Softball Complex in Shawnee, Kansas. The Mid-America Intercollegiate Athletics Association will serve as host.

Results: Scores from regional play will be published in the May 18 issue of The NCAA News. Results from the finals will appear May 25.

Championship notes: This year's championship finals will feature six teams. Previous finals included four teams....Only one of the last six championship final games have been shutouts. By comparison, four of the first six championships featured shutouts.

What they are saying

Sandy Jerstad, head coach

"Our pitching is tremendously strong. I have the nice problem of trying to keep three pitchers happy....(And) I'm very happy with our entire team. All the way up and down our lineup we're strong. I don't think we have a weak spot."

Augustana's (South Dakota) pitching staff, which includes Signe DeJong, is giving up just 0.69 earned runs per game.

Michelle Carlson leads a potent Trenton State offense with a .569 batting average. She also set a Division III single-season home-run record.

Division III Women's Softball

Trenton State is beatable, but still tough to handle

Event: 1994 Division III Women's Softball Championship.

Overview: Trenton State looked like the dominant team until being swept by Rowan in a double-header April 12. But with only three losses in 38 games and a potent offense led by junior third baseman Michelle Carlson (hitting .569 with a Division III-record 16 home runs), the Lions should be a force in the playoffs. Defending champion Central (Iowa) faces a tough road with the loss of six of its top seven hitters from 1993 and stiff competition from Iowa Intercollegiate Athletic Conference foes Buena Vista and Simpson (ranked first and second, respectively, in the West region). Perennial power Eastern Connecticut State sits atop the Northeast region with a 20-8 record.

Field: The championship provides for a field of 24 teams. Five conferences are granted automatic qualification; the remaining teams will be selected at large. The Division III subcommittee of the NCAA Women's Softball Committee will select at least two teams each from the Northeast, Mid-Atlantic, Central, Midwest and West regions. Four teams will compete at each of six regional sites. The six regional winners will advance to the finals. All regionals and the finals will use a double-elimination format.

Dates and sites: Teams will be selected for the championship May 8. Regional competition will be May 13-15 at on-campus sites. Finals will be played May 19-22 at the James I. Moyer Sports Complex in Salem, Virginia.

Results: Scores from regional play will be published in the May 18 issue of The NCAA News. Results from the finals will appear May 25.

Championship notes: The teams that squared off in last year's title game — Central (Iowa) and Trenton State — are not strangers to championship play. Since the championship began in 1982, Trenton State has appeared in the final game nine times, winning four. Central (Iowa) was making its fourth appearance in the title game and claimed its third championship. The only team with more championship appearances than last year's finalists is Eastern Connecticut State, which has won 63 of its 87 playoff games and won four titles.

What they are saying

George Wares, head coach
Central (Iowa)

"Our conference (Iowa Intercollegiate) is loaded this year. Buena Vista is definitely a contender to win it all, and you have us and Wartburg, which had a double-header sweep of Buena Vista. Even William Penn, which may finish fifth, has been playing very well. We have a couple of teams, if not more, that have a chance of doing well if they get on a roll in the playoffs. The same can be said of the New Jersey Athletic Conference."

Nine additional summer basketball events are certified

Nine more summer basketball events have been certified in accordance with legislation regulating Division I men's and women's basketball coaches' attendance at camps.

In accordance with NCAA Bylaw 13.13.5, basketball coaches at Division I institutions may attend only institutional summer basketball camps as defined in Bylaw 13.13.1.1 and noninstitutional organized events held during the July evaluation period that are certified under Bylaw 30.15.

The Division I summer evaluation periods are July 5-31 for men and July 8-31 for women.

To date, 35 events have been certified by the Association. Other certified events were reported in the April 20 and 27 issues of The NCAA News.

A previously certified event, the 1994 Summer Basketball Festival Camp July 15-16 at Macomb Community College, has been canceled. However, a Summer Basketball Festival Camp at Wayne State University (Michigan) still is scheduled for July 22-23.

More information about certification can be obtained from Christopher D. Schoemann, NCAA legislative assistant, at the national office.

Following are the seven men's and two women's summer events certified most recently, with sites and dates of camps, and names, addresses and telephone numbers of principal owners or operators.

Men's events

■ Midwest All-American Girl's Basketball Camp. Eastern Ohio Basketball Camp in Sherrodsville, Ohio; July 10-14. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Huggins, 8149 Dawn Road, Sherrodsville, Ohio 44675 (614/269-1335).

Nineteen more summer leagues gain certification

Another 19 summer basketball leagues have been certified by the Association for 1994 competition, increasing to 56 the number approved this year.

Student-athletes from NCAA institutions participate each summer in one of hundreds of leagues certified by the Association in accordance with NCAA Bylaws 14.7.5.2 and 30.14.

Questions about the application process or requirements for NCAA certification should be directed to Christopher D. Schoemann, NCAA legislative assistant, at the national office.

Following are the leagues — including 11 for men, four for women and four leagues combining men's and women's competition — recently approved for participation. Other approved leagues were published in the April 13 and 20 issues of The NCAA News.

Men's

■ California — Drake Summer League, San Anselmo.

■ District of Columbia — James Jabbo Kenner, Washington.

Women's lacrosse: The NCAA Women's Lacrosse Committee is soliciting bids from NCAA institutions interested in hosting the 1996 and 1997 National Collegiate and Division III Women's Lacrosse Championships. The 1996 championships are scheduled for May 18-19. The 1997 championships are scheduled for May 17-18. Representatives of institutions interested in hosting the event for one or more years can contact R. Wayne Burrow, NCAA assistant director of championships, at the NCAA national office.

I softball bracket to air live

The announcement of the field for the NCAA Division I Women's Softball Championship will be aired live via satellite May 15.

The championship bracket will be revealed at 7 p.m. (Central time). Satellite coordinates for the broadcast, which will originate from the studios of Public Broadcasting System affiliate KCPT-TV in Kansas City, Missouri, are Galaxy 7, Transponder 13.

The audio for the show will be on 6.2 and 6.8.

Coach's pay up to judge

A judge will determine how much the women's golf coach at Oklahoma State University should be paid following a jury's split verdict in a sex-discrimination lawsuit.

A federal jury awarded Ann Pitts $36,000 in damages April 21, but decided she is not entitled to the same pay as men's golf coach Mike Holder, according to The Associated Press.

Pitts had sued the university for sex discrimination and had asked that she be paid a salary equal to what Holder earns.

The jury ruled that Pitts had been discriminated against on the basis of gender but did not find that the university violated the Equal Pay Act.

A trial judge will consider at a later date what Pitts' salary should be, according to Stanley Ward, Pitts' attorney.

The long climb

Barbie Bradbrook, a member of the Montana State University ski team, takes her turn climbing a rock wall during the university's recent "Night Court" activities. The event, which is sponsored by an NCAA CHOICES grant, is one of the most popular activities held by the university's athletics department. As many as 500 students show up from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. twice a month for free instruction in sports like rock climbing, rappelling, kayaking, scuba diving, volleyball, basketball, fly fishing, mechanical-bull riding, in-line skating and skiing.

Doyle selected as new director of eligibility

Carrie A. Doyle, an NCAA enforcement representative since 1987, has been selected as NCAA director of eligibility, effective immediately.

Doyle succeeds Janet M. Justus, who assumed duties as director of education resources May 2 (see March 30 issue of The NCAA News).

Doyle becomes responsible for administration of the Association's eligibility appeals program. She also will serve as staff liaison to the NCAA Eligibility Committee.

She earned a bachelor's degree at State University College at Cortland and master's degrees in business administration and athletics administration at the University of Iowa.

While a graduate student, she served as a teaching assistant for physical education activities courses, a graduate assistant softball coach and a research assistant in marketing.

Five selected for GTE hall of fame

Five outstanding former academic all-Americans — including a dominating pair of basketball players — will be inducted into the GTE Academic All-America Hall of Fame May 17 in Washington, D.C.

The inductees are:

■ Anne Donovan, a three-time basketball Olympian and the 1983 Naismith Trophy winner who led Old Dominion University to a national championship in 1980. She is now an assistant coach at Old Dominion.

■ Dr. Richard Mayo, who led the U.S. Air Force Academy to its only undefeated football season in 1961, then served as an active fighter pilot and founded a Houston drug- and alcohol-recovery facility.

■ Lee Roy Selmon, a Lombardi Award and Outland Trophy winner as a football defensive lineman in the mid-1970s at the University of Oklahoma and currently associate athletics director at the University of South Florida.

■ Bill Walton, a three-time national player of the year in basketball at the University of California, Los Angeles, where he played on two Division I championship teams in the early 1970s and was part of the Bruins' record 88-game winning streak. He is now an NBC Sports broadcaster.

Also entering the hall of fame will be Walton's coach, John Wooden, who will be an honorary inductee. Wooden, who led UCLA to a record 10 Division I basketball championships, becomes the second individual to be inducted based on achievements before the creation of the academic all-America program. He is the only person who has been inducted into the National Basketball Hall of Fame as both a player and coach.

To be eligible for the GTE hall of fame, an athlete must have been an academic all-American with a cumulative grade-point average of 3.000 (4.000 scale).

The hall of fame was established by GTE and the College Sports Information Directors of America to honor former academic all-Americans who have attained high achievements in their chosen professions and have made substantial contributions to the community.

At the induction ceremonies, the honorees will receive their awards from sports personalities who have helped shape the inductees' lives: former Old Dominion basketball coach Marianne Stanley (Donovan); former Air Force football coach Ben Martin (Mayo); Dewey and Lucious Selmon, who played alongside brother Lee Roy at Oklahoma; former Portland Trail Blazers coach Jack Ramsay (Walton), and DeMatha High School (Maryland) basketball coach Morgan Wootten (Wooden).

Seventeen additional finalists selected for NACDA/Walt Disney scholarships

Seventeen more finalists for the fifth annual NACDA/Disney Scholar-Athlete Postgraduate Scholarships — representing sports other than football — have been selected by the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics and the Walt Disney Company.

The finalists were chosen from 228 nominees and join 21 football finalists — 11 from Division I-A institutions and 10 from other NCAA institutions — who were announced earlier this year.

The non-football finalists are Lawrence Bercutt (water polo), Stanford University; Kelly Blair (track and field), University of Oregon; Julie Bremner (volleyball), University of California, Los Angeles; Julie Duerler (soccer), North Carolina Wesleyan College; Erin Engle (cross country/track and field), University of Wyoming, and Martin Eriksson (track and field), University of Minnesota, Twin Cities.

Also, Mindy Everhart (softball), Ohio Northern University; Katie Haller (volleyball), University of Southern California; Tanya Hughes (track and field), University of Arizona; Katharina Larsson (golf), University of Tennessee, Knoxville; Kristen Maskala (basketball), Marquette University, and Laurie Nelson (diving), Minnesota.

Also, Jason Rhodes (track and field), Claremont McKenna-Harvey Mudd-Scripps Colleges; Robert Stock (golf), University of Southern Mississippi; Amy Sullivan (volleyball), Washington University (Missouri); Stephani Williams (softball), University of Kansas, and James Zurcher (tennis), University of Notre Dame.

All 38 finalists now will be reviewed by a blue ribbon committee that includes some of the top figures in the athletics world. The committee will select 10 winners who each will receive a $5,000 grant for postgraduate studies. The $50,000 in scholarships is provided by the Walt Disney Company.

Because of the Walt Disney Company's involvement with the Disneyland Pigskin Classic, five of the 10 scholarships will be awarded to football players (three in Division I-A and two in other divisions).

The scholarship recipients will be honored during NACDA's 29th annual convention June 5-8 in Marco Island, Florida.

Nominees have a grade-point average of 3.000 or above (4.000 scale) and have been selected for all-American or all-conference honors.

The Video is produced by West Virginia University and the U.S. Shooting Team. Especially useful for viewers not familiar with rifle shooting, the video is a fine introduction to demands of the sport as well as to the steps in getting a program off the ground. Considerations such as cost, facilities/space needs, finding coaches, recruiting, equipment, transportation and other aspects of starting a rifle team are covered. The video is available in VHS format only. To obtain your free copy, call 304/296-1343, or write: Marsha Beasley, WVU Rifle Coach, P.O. Box 0877, Morgantown, WV 26507-0877.

Check out the NCAA® Sports Library

The NCAA Sports Library is a collection of more than 50 publications offered annually by the Association.

Representing a broad range of topics, these books and manuals provide valuable information and guidelines to collegiate administrators and coaches, as well as sports fans.

Rules books, statistical and instructional manuals, records book, and publications published specifically for NCAA member institutions are all part of the Sports Library. Officiating cassettes also are offered.

See what the NCAA Sports Library has to offer. We will be happy to send our catalog to you upon request.

Nominations

University (Region 2). One of those elected must be from Region 3 of Division III. One must be a chief executive officer (to replace Bottoms).

Those who plan to nominate individuals for Council positions should consult Constitution 4.8.2, which lists the Association's geographical regions for purposes of Council representation.

Where possible, nominees for the Council should have current or prior service on other NCAA committee(s) or related service. Initial access to the Association's committee structure should be at the committee level whenever possible, rather than at the Council level.

Rules committees make few changes the 30-second clock for more than 25 years, and there is no appreciable sentiment to change," said Marcy Weston, secretary-rules editor for the women's committee.

"The women's committee is very satisfied with the clock and no backcourt count."

Other issues

In response to pleas from the NCAA Presidents Commission to strengthen the fighting and misconduct rules and enhance sportsmanship, both committees expanded the suspension rule for fighting to include coaches and team personnel. The Points of Emphasis for both men and women also will pay specific attention to various areas of misconduct, including abusive and vulgar language, taunting and baiting, and bench decorum.

Both committees also agreed to allow a player with blood on his or her uniform to return to the game before play is resumed if a team's medical staff determines that the uniform is not saturated. Currently, a player who is taken to the team's bench with blood on the uniform cannot return until the clock has started again.

The men's committee spent considerable time discussing the "advantage/disadvantage" philosophy that has governed basketball rules for several decades.

"This philosophy presumes that the intent of a rule is to keep one player from gaining an advantage over another through the use of an improper move or play. The rules are applied so that in most cases a foul is called when breaking the rule creates an advantage or disadvantage," said Henry O. Nichols, secretary-rules editor for the men's committee.

Judgment required

For example, there is contact in basketball but it becomes a violation if it creates a specific advantage. That approach, however, requires some judgment on the part of the official. In reaffirming its commitment to the philosophy, the committee also agreed to appoint a technical committee that will identify areas in which some advantage/disadvantage judgment can be removed and more "automatic" calls can be established.

"We hope the technical committee can devote some concentrated attention to identifying situations where interpretation is not required to call a violation," Nichols said.

In other rules changes, the men's committee voted to:

- Allow soft, pliable guards on the hands, fingers, arms and elbows of players;

- Restrict scoring attempts in the last three-tenths of a second in any period to tip-ins, and

- Include hand checking and illegal post play in the Points of Emphasis for both men and women.

The men's committee also will include hanging on the rim and traveling in its Points of Emphasis.

Officiating committee approves videoconference clinics for coaches

Plans for a fall basketball officiating clinic for coaches via video conference were approved by the NCAA Basketball Officiating Committee at its April 27 meeting in Chicago.

The recommendation was forwarded to the NCAA Executive Committee for consideration. If approved, the video conference would satisfy the requirement that each Division I institution must be represented at one of the fall officiating clinics by the head coach or a full-time assistant coach. However, only the head coach's participation in the video conference would fulfill the requirement of institutional participation in a clinic.

Dates and sites for six officiating clinics for men and five for women were approved for October 1994.

Attendance in 1994 is mandatory for all Division I men's and women's officials and conference supervisors and for head coaches or full-time coaches from institutions that are not represented in the proposed video conference.

Following are the dates and sites for the 1994 men's clinics:

- October 8, Greensboro, North Carolina.

- October 15, Dallas.

- October 22, Atlanta.

- October 23, San Francisco.

- October 29, Newark, New Jersey.

- October 30, Chicago.

Following are the dates and sites for the 1994 women's clinics:

- October 1, Newark, New Jersey.

- October 2, Atlanta.

- October 15, Los Angeles.

- October 16, Dallas.

- October 23, Chicago.

The committee also voted to continue its policy of considering only those officials who attend one of the fall basketball officiating clinics as candidates for working at the NCAA Division I Men's and Women's Basketball Championships.

Other highlights

In other actions at its April 27 meeting in Chicago, the Basketball Officiating Committee:

- Agreed to encourage the NCAA Divisions II and III Men's and Women's Basketball Committees to consider using Divisions II and III officials during the men's and women's championships in those divisions.

- Voted to recommend to the membership that student-athletes be allowed to receive compensation for officiating intramural basketball games and that the compensation be exempt from legislation that limits the student-athlete's financial aid to the value of a full-grant-in-aid as defined in NCAA Bylaw 15.02.4.

- Voted to request that a portion of the Division I conference grant money currently earmarked for the improvement of men's and women's basketball officiating programs be made available for Divisions II and III conferences for the specific purpose of enhancing their officiating programs.

- Approved the 1994-95 budget recommendations for men's and women's basketball officiating programs. The women's budget recommendation is $112,350 and the men's is $153,000.

The only other rules change of significance for women was permitting the "wide-channel" ball for intercollegiate competition.

The only experimental rule that was approved was for men, where each team will be allowed to have one 20-second timeout in each half in addition to the current number of timeouts permitted. Conferences must apply for permission to experiment with the rule.

resources and staff liaison to the committee. "And they thought it would have a better chance of passing if required only at the institutional level."

The committee's optimism rests with survey results from last year indicating that a large number of institutions currently have started, or are in the process of starting, student-athlete advisory committees on their campuses. Those committees will help create a networking system that eventually will reach more conference offices, the committee believes.

The committee also discussed other possible legislative proposals, including ones involving the one-time transfer exception and Pell Grant restrictions.

The committee supported, but took no formal action on, a proposal that would allow nonrecruited student-athletes in all sports to take advantage of the one-time transfer exception. Currently, only student-athletes in a sport other than Division I basketball or Division I men's ice hockey may use the one-time transfer exception, which allows a student-athlete to transfer to and compete at another institution without having to sit out one full academic year.

The committee also supported a proposal that would eliminate restrictions regarding Pell Grants. Currently, a student-athlete may receive a Pell Grant in combination with other institutional financial aid, as long as the overall grant total does not exceed the value of a full grant-in-aid plus $2,400 in Division I institutions or $1,500 in Division II, or the student-athlete's cost of attendance, whichever is less.

Student-athlete committee nominations due June 17

The NCAA Student-Athlete Advisory Committee is looking to fill its roster.

The committee, which has yet to fill all of its available positions since expanding from 16 to 28 members last year, is seeking nominations for seven positions that currently are open or will become open when current terms expire September 1.

The nominations must be submitted in writing by June 17 to Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA national office (fax number 913/339-0035). The committee hopes to have all positions filled by its August meeting.

Those who nominate student-athletes should include the nominee's grade-point average, major, sport in which he or she participates and expected date of graduation. A student-athlete may be nominated to serve on the committee for up to one year after he or she has graduated.

The committee is seeking representatives from the following divisions and regions:

- Division I, Region 1

- Division I, Region 2

- Division I, Region 3

- Division II, Region 2

- Division II, Region 4

- Division III, Region 1

- Division III, Region 3

"The committee expanded in order to have as much representation as possible at each meeting," said Janet M. Justus, NCAA director of education resources and staff liaison to the committee. "People need to realize that the student-athlete's life is not typical of other committee members' lives. Student-athletes' commitments and demands are different."

"That is why it's important that all positions are filled."

Other highlights

In other actions at its April 22-23 meeting, the Student-Athlete Advisory Committee:

- Discussed at length the issue of coaches' shoe contracts. Although it made no formal recommendation, the committee generally believed that student-athletes should benefit directly in some way from such contracts.

- Supported the idea of an NCAA Council-sponsored resolution that would establish a formal "grievance" procedure for student-athletes.

- Elected Richard Kacmarynski of Central College (Iowa) as the new student chair of the committee. Kacmarynski will succeed Matthew Leightner of Haverford College, whose term expires September 1.

Deaths

Capt. James W. Liebertz, who served as athletics director at Merchant Marine from 1950 to 1972, died April 25 of natural causes in Kings Point, New York. He was 80. Liebertz, a retired U.S. Navy captain, joined Merchant Marine in 1945 as assistant AD and coach of the track team. His teams won seven consecutive mile relays at the Penn Relays. After becoming athletics director, he helped the institution expand the sports program from five to 16 intercollegiate sports.

Jim Snyder, head men's basketball coach at Ohio from 1949 to 1974, died April 27 in Palatine, Illinois, after a long illness. He was 75. Snyder compiled a 355-244 record at Ohio and set a school record for career victories. He had 20 winning seasons in his 25 years as the Bobcats' coach and won seven Mid-American Athletic Conference championships. Snyder's Ohio teams appeared in postseason tournaments seven times.

Iowa bans American Indian mascots from athletics events

The athletics board at the University of Iowa has joined its counterparts at two other Big Ten Conference institutions and banned from athletics events mascots that depict American Indians.

After months of trying to draft a policy, the athletics board agreed April 26 that American Indian mascots are "demeaning and offensive" and will not be allowed at Iowa's athletics buildings or fields, according to The Associated Press.

In other actions involving nicknames and mascots, Marquette University announced May 2 that it will change the name of its athletics teams from Warriors to Golden Eagles. Juniata College changed April 30 from Indians to Eagles.

"The use of dance, music, symbols or other behavioral representations of Native Americans trivializes that culture and is also offensive," the Iowa board policy says.

Not only are such mascots banned, but so is music, dance and "other behaviors that represent Native American culture in trivial, negative or stereotypical ways," the policy says.

Similar policies have been enacted at the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, and the University of Wisconsin, Madison.

The approval of the policy also serves notice that Iowa will not schedule — where it has discretion — nonconference teams that have American Indian mascots.

However, the Hawkeyes still must play Big Ten rival University of Illinois, Champaign, whose mascot is Chief Illiniwek.

Ann Rhodes, Iowa vice-president for university relations and author of the policy, conceded there are limits to the degree that Iowa can enforce the policy.

She said the university would not — and could not — use an iron hand to enforce the policy.

"We would send a letter expressing our displeasure. We can't do much more than that," she said.

Name selected in voting

Meanwhile, Marquette replaced a nickname that has been used by its athletics teams since 1954.

The Rev. Albert J. DiUlio, president of the Roman Catholic university in Milwaukee, announced that Golden Eagles won 54 percent support from the 2,501 students and faculty who participated in polling April 29 and from alumni across the country who randomly were surveyed by telephone.

"I'm very happy with it," said DiUlio. "I think it will allow us to go back to a favorable mascot."

But some students weren't so pleased.

"I'm a senior, so I'm graduating a Warrior and I couldn't be happier about it," said Sean Murphy, from South Bend, Indiana. "I'm going to go down to the Golden Eagle shop and try to get one of the last few Warrior T-shirts."

From 1964 to 1971, the school used a "Willie Wampum" cartoon caricature of an Indian warrior before that mascot was dropped as offensive. The school logo in recent years has been a silhouette drawing of an Indian warrior.

Some Marquette students blamed American Indian students for forcing the issue, and that has blunted their enthusiasm about the new nickname, said Jeff Peterson, an American Indian counselor.

Gabrielle Grant, president of the American Indian Student Association, said she was not surprised some non-Indian students couldn't understand why the Warriors nickname was offensive.

"I'd say that they could never know because they're not American Indian, and I'm sure there are lots of things about their cultures that I wouldn't find offensive, but they would," said Grant.

1994 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 33 Contacts and evaluations — Divisions I-A and I-AA football

Divisions I-A and I-AA institutions should note that with the adoption of Proposal No. 33 (effective August 1, 1994), the following regulations regarding contacts and evaluations apply:

1. Any visit to a prospect's school shall constitute a contact for a particular week, even if no contact is made with the prospect. [NCAA Bylaw 13.02.3.1]

2. One contact per week is permitted either at the prospect's home or educational institution, except during the January contact periods when only one contact is permitted per contact period (i.e., January 3-16 and January 17-29), rather than per week. [Bylaws 13.1.5.1.2 and 30.10.5]

3. A visit to the prospect's school and home during the same calendar day shall be considered one contact. [Bylaw 13.1.5.1.2]

4. Institutional staff members may visit a prospect's educational institution on not more than one occasion during a particular week. [Bylaw 13.1.5.1]

5. There is a limit of seven in-person, off-campus recruiting contacts per prospect at any site. [Bylaw 13.1.7]

6. Staff members are limited to two evaluations per prospect during the academic year and not more than one evaluation may be used during the fall and May evaluation periods, respectively. [Bylaw 13.1.9]

7. The length of the discretionary May evaluation period is increased from 15 consecutive days to any 20 days (excluding Sundays and Memorial Day). [Bylaw 30.10.5]

In addition, during its February 17, 1994, telephone conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee reviewed issues related to Proposal No. 33 and determined the following:

1. In Divisions I-A and I-AA football, any visit by an institutional coaching staff member to a prospect's high school, preparatory school or two-year college during a contact period shall count as a contact for all prospects in that sport at the educational institution.

2. The provisions of Bylaw 13.1.9.8 remain applicable in the sport of football. Thus, if an institutional staff member observes a prospect participating in "live" activities (e.g., practice or competition) during a contact period and subsequently makes a permissible contact with the prospect (or the prospect's parents or legal guardians) on the same day, the institution is charged with both a contact and an evaluation of the prospect.

Finally, during its April 6, 1994, telephone conference, the NCAA Administrative Committee amended Bylaw 30.10.5-(g) for May 1994 by increasing the number of evaluation days from 15 consecutive to any 20 days (excluding Memorial Day and Sundays) during May 1 through May 31 selected at the discretion of the institution and designated in writing in the office of the director of athletics. Please note that the current legislation permitting four evaluations from May 1, 1994, through April 30, 1995, is in effect until August 1, 1994. Therefore, Divisions I-A and I-AA institutions are permitted four evaluations per prospect from May 1, 1994, through April 30, 1995; however, not more than two of those evaluations may occur after August 1, 1994.

Corrections 1994-95 NCAA Manual

Institutions should make the following corrections to the 1994-95 Manual:

1. Bylaws 15.4.9.4 (matrix-rating system) and 15.4.9.5 (adjustments to financial aid package) (page 193) are applicable only to Division III institutions.

2. Bylaws 14.4.3.2.1 (student-athletes entering collegiate institution on or after August 1, 1991, but prior to August 1, 1992), 14.4.3.2.1.1 (application of rule to transfer and continuing student), 14.4.3.2.1.2 (timing of certification) and 14.4.3.2.1.3 (waiver procedures) (pages 152-153) are applicable only to Division I institutions.

3. Bylaw 17.02.1.2.1-(h) (safety exception — wrestling) (page 229) is applicable only to Division I institutions.

4. Bylaw 13.1.9.4.1 (time period for counting football evaluations — Divisions I-A and I-AA) (page 96) should read: "In the sport of football in Divisions I-A and I-AA, the time period during which the permissible number of evaluations may take place shall be from May 1 through April 30 of the following academic year."

Correction 1994-95 NCAA Guide for the College-Bound Student-Athlete

Divisions I and II institutions should note that there are two errors on page 5 of the 1994-95 Guide for the College-Bound Student-Athlete. The answer to the question regarding counting courses for learning-disabled or handicapped students and the answer to the question regarding satisfying core-course requirements with studies in a foreign country incorrectly indicate that documentation and academic records should be sent to the NCAA national office for review. The documentation and academic records should be sent to the NCAA Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse for review.

If an institution has a question or comment regarding this column, such correspondence should be directed to Nancy L. Mitchell, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office. This information is available on the Collegiate Sports Network.

Court: Drug policy violates privacy

1984. By 1986, the school's definition of student-athlete had expanded to include student trainers, managers and cheerleaders. Students found to have used drugs were given a one-year suspension for a first offense and permanently suspended for a second.

In 1986, David Derdeyn, a cross country athlete, sued over the mandatory urinalysis.

A Colorado judge ruled that the random drug-testing policy was an "unreasonable search" under the Fourth Amendment.

The Fourth Amendment covers government searches only and usually cannot be used to challenge drug testing by private schools, private employers or private entities.

That judge's decision invalidating the university's drug-testing policy was upheld by a state appeals court and by the Colorado Supreme Court. The Colorado program differs from the NCAA program in a number of ways.

In its November ruling, the state Supreme Court rejected the school's argument that student-athletes do not have the same expectations of privacy as other students.

"We have not been persuaded that CU's athletes have a greatly diminished expectation of privacy, nor are we persuaded that CU's program is not significantly intrusive," the state Supreme Court said.

Having a ball

It didn't matter that the ball was made for soccer or the field was made for football. Vanderbilt University men's basketball player Dan Hall gave third-grader Carl Smith some basketball tips at a field day and picnic April 27 at Vanderbilt's Dudley Field. The event was the spring service project for the Vanderbilt Student-Athlete Advisory Board, an organization of representatives from each of the university's varsity sports, along with a representative from the cheerleader and student-support groups (managers, trainers, sports-information students, etc.). The advisory board meets with athletics department administrators monthly to address the needs and concerns of Vanderbilt student-athletes. The board also sponsors service projects throughout the year. Approximately 30 Vanderbilt student-athletes played host to 74 Ross Elementary School students during the spring event.

ISSUE HIGHLIGHTS HEALTH, SAFETY OF ATHLETES

By Ellen Hanley
ASSISTANT DIRECTOR OF SPORTS SCIENCES

At its 1994 Convention, the NCAA membership again demonstrated its support and concern for student-athletes by passing health and safety legislation. This issue highlights that legislation.

With the overwhelming vote to institute a year-round ban on tobacco use during practices and competition, each athletics department must be prepared to assist student-athletes and employees in breaking the connection between sports and tobacco. For many involved in college athletics, chewing tobacco and using moist snuff have become dangerous, potentially deadly addictions. As part of a continuing educational effort to solve this problem, the NCAA, in conjunction with Major League Baseball and the National Cancer Institute, will distribute the video "Spit Tobacco: A Dangerous Game" to member institutions this fall.

Judging from the 1992 study of Big Ten wrestlers discussed on page 3, the new tobacco legislation will have immediate impact. This study indicates the need for prevention and cessation programs for a significant number of student-athletes. An especially telling statistic from the study is that 54 percent of student-athletes said that their university had never presented a program on spit tobacco.

The safety-exception legislation passed in January also will affect athletics trainers, coaches and student-athletes. Bernie DePalma, head athletics trainer at Cornell University and a member of the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports, shares his concerns about educating athletics-department staff about their added safety responsibility during out-of-season voluntary workouts on page 4.

Another competitive-safeguards committee member, Glenn Wong of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, addresses the same issue in his review of litigation involving an off-season practice fatality.

A call for membership support of a potentially life-saving bone-marrow registry is given by Heather Dow, assistant women's lacrosse coach at Old Dominion University. A simple procedure performed during annual physical examinations could result in donations that could save countless lives.

We hope this newsletter will bring you up to date on these issues. Your comments and suggestions are valuable. We encourage your participation.

TOBACCO THROWN OUT OF GAME

By Martin T. Benson
EDITOR

With the NCAA's recent banning of tobacco use by coaches, players and officials during practices and games, the Association took a national lead on the issue.

Effective August 1, the legislation prohibits use of tobacco products, a ban that has applied to NCAA championship events since 1991.

Surgeon General Dr. M. Joycelyn Elders applauded the action.

"By taking this step, the NCAA has shown significant national leadership in breaking the connection between sports and tobacco," she said. "The ban will send a needed and unmistakable message to young people about the risks of both smoking and spit tobacco. I can only hope that professional sports will follow this courageous action."

Legislative Background

The legislation was sponsored by the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports, which was especially concerned with the use of spit tobacco, which had grown steadily in popularity with student-athletes despite its scientifically proven link with oral cancer, other mouth disorders and nicotine addiction.

Kathy D. Clark, chair of the competitive-safeguards committee and associate director of athletics at the University of Idaho, said that the NCAA, despite its educational program on the subject and the well-documented evidence of the health risks associated with spit tobacco, hadn't had much success in deterring its use.

"In 1993, 26.9 percent of the athletes involved in the NCAA substance-abuse studies reported the use of smokeless tobacco — up seven percentage points from 1985," she said when proposing the legislation.

Dr. Chris McGrew, chair of the competitive-safeguards committee's drug-testing and drug-education subcommittee and team physician at the University of New Mexico, said that such a ban had been discussed by the committee "for at least five or six years" before finally being proposed at this year's NCAA Convention. Given the history on the subject, he said he was surprised at the ease with which the proposal passed.

The championships ban on tobacco, for example, was initially proposed to the Executive Committee by the competitive-safeguards committee in 1989 but didn't gain approval until 1991.

The acceptance of that rule, according to McGrew, plus the success of similar rules on a local level led to the national rule. A survey of conference commissioners on the subject taken before this year's Convention showed a 75-percent level of support.

"Many conferences already had imposed similar rules, so the ban already had its grass roots at various levels," McGrew said.

The numbers back McGrew's contention. A 1992 survey to which 65 commissioners responded showed that 24 conferences had some type of policy banning spit-tobacco use in place.

"By the time of the Convention, I think the feeling was, 'we do it at the conference level, why not do it nationwide,'" he said.

When the championships rule was approved, then-chair of the competitive-safeguards committee Malcolm C. McInnis Jr., said that "from a health standpoint, student-athletes shouldn't use tobacco at all, but it is impossible to ban it during the season and in athletes' free time."

Enforcement

The rule still could be difficult to enforce, but it's tough to tell exactly how it will work until it's put into practice. Stephen A. Mallonee, NCAA director of legislative services, said that enforcement is the responsibility of each individual institution, not a job for referees, umpires or other game officials.

"One of the responsibilities of membership is to comply with the rules," Mallonee said. "If you know a student-athlete is using tobacco (during a practice or game), the institution is obligated to apply the rule (just like any other bylaw in the NCAA Manual).

"If one school allows (its student-athletes or coaches to use) tobacco and another school reports that to the enforcement department, and it can be proven that tobacco was used, the (potential) penalty will likely be more severe, just as with other violations (where rules are knowingly violated and not self-reported).

"It's not a matter of just spitting it out and going back and playing. If a student-athlete uses tobacco (during a practice or game), the student-athlete would be ineligible for the rest of the practice or game."

McGrew concedes that enforcement could be a problem initially at some levels, but that should wane as the public, media and institutions grow more accustomed to the rule.

"Given that so many conferences already ban it, the fact that you already couldn't use it at championships and the potential penalty involved, it puts pressure on everyone in the athletics department, not only coaches and athletes, but also administrators," McGrew said. "Suppose someone from the local press notices that a college's athletes are using during games, and (publicly) asks why, when it's clearly not allowed. It could pose quite a public relations problem for the college."

Educational Effort

The competitive-safeguards committee is developing an educational packet to distribute to the membership in August. The packet, which, according to Ellen Hanley, assistant director for sports sciences, is in its planning stages, will include materials that will assist member institutions in educating student-athletes, coaches and support staff about the ban.

As part of that packet, each institution will receive a five-minute video on the subject, "Spit Tobacco: A Dangerous Game," that was developed in a collaborative effort of Major League Baseball and the National Cancer Institute. Plans are for the video to be sent to the membership in August.

McGrew said the committee's research indicated that the year-round ban, if it works, could potentially cause many student-athlete users to quit using tobacco permanently.

"It's important to note that many users indicate that they

COURT REQUIRES PROPER MEDICAL PRECAUTIONS

By Glenn M. Wong and Carol A. Barr
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS, AMHERST

In what is no doubt just the first salvo in an extended battle, an appeals court ruled in Kleinknecht v. Gettysburg College [CA 3, No. 92-7160 (3rd Cir. 1993)] that a college owes a duty of care to its recruited student-athletes regarding reasonably foreseeable medical emergencies that may occur during school-sponsored athletics activities.

(The Pennsylvania Supreme Court has not addressed this issue, but since the parties are from different states and at least one of the parties opted to have the case heard in Federal court, the case was reviewed by the Federal court according to Pennsylvania state statutes.)

During a practice of the intercollegiate men's lacrosse team at Gettysburg, a 20-year-old student-athlete with no history of severe medical problems, who had been recruited to play lacrosse at the college, died of cardiac arrest. His parents brought a wrongful death suit against the college, arguing that it had a duty of care to their son by virtue of his status as a varsity student-athlete participating in an intercollegiate program. They claimed this duty was breached by the college when it failed to provide proper medical services at the time of their son's death.

Since the practice session was held during the nontraditional fall practice season, no athletics trainers were required to be at the practices. Neither coach was certified in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR), and neither had a two-way portable radio on the practice field. The nearest telephone was between 200 and 250 yards away, inside the training room at the football stadium. The shortest route to the telephone required scaling an 8-foot high fence. The lacrosse coaches said that they had never discussed how they would handle an emergency if one occurred during fall practice.

Between five and 12 minutes after the student-athlete dropped to the ground (the exact time is in dispute), the head trainer arrived at the scene and administered CPR. It is also estimated that 10 more minutes elapsed before the first ambulance arrived.

Under Pennsylvania law, negligence cases require that a plaintiff establish a duty requiring the defendant to conform to a certain standard, a failure to conform to the standard, a causal connection between the conduct and the resulting injury, and actual loss or damage.

The plaintiffs argued that the student-athlete was recruited to play lacrosse and was stricken while engaged in this activity, not while performing private affairs as a student at the college. In addition, the plaintiffs cited Hanson v. Kynast [No. CA-828 (Ohio Ct. App. 1985)], in which an appeals court held that a university owed a duty of care to a student-athlete who was seriously injured while playing in a lacrosse game against another college.

The District Court ruled for Gettysburg and granted a summary judgment in the college's favor. The court found that even though the parents had presented evidence showing that severe injuries can occur during contact sports, the college still had no duty to the student-athlete because the school could not foresee that a young athlete who had no previous history of medical trouble was likely to suffer cardiac arrest during a practice or game.

Providing medical support during out-of-season practices in contact sports like lacrosse is both a legal and safety issue.

The Court of Appeals, however, found that a special relationship did exist between the college and its student-athletes, because the student-athlete was recruited to play lacrosse for the college and was stricken while participating in this activity. This special relationship is sufficient, the court ruled, to impose a duty of reasonable care on the college.

The Court of Appeals also found the District Court's definitions of foreseeability — that the college could not foresee cardiac arrest occurring to a student-athlete who had no history of medical problems — as being too narrow. Instead, the Court of Appeals felt that although the specific risk that a person would suffer a cardiac arrest may be unforeseeable, the parents had produced ample evidence that a life-threatening injury occurring during participation in an athletics event like lacrosse was reasonably foreseeable. The college, therefore did owe the student-athlete a duty to take reasonable precautions against the risk of death while he was taking part in its intercollegiate lacrosse program. The parents had argued that this duty of care required the college to be ready for any life-threatening injury and to respond swiftly and adequately to a medical emergency — and the appeals court agreed.

The court was clear in stating that the class of student to whom a college owes the duty of care is limited to recruited student-athletes who are participating in the activity for which they were brought to the college. The court went on to state that whether the college breached its duty to provide prompt and adequate emergency medical services is a question for a jury to decide.

Although this case is based on Pennsylvania law, its implications may be far-reaching. As a result of this decision, colleges and universities may need to review the policies and procedures they use regarding medical services at athletics team practices and events. Some of the issues schools may need to reconsider include: how long it would take to get emergency assistance to various fields and stadiums; whether coaches should be certified in CPR and know how to handle an emergency; where the closest phone is; whether trainers should be available at nontraditional practices; what procedure should be used to get in touch with a trainer if there are none at the practice site; and whether trainers are available in the training room throughout the practice time. Also, since the decision specifically referred to a contact sport, schools will have to consider whether noncontact sports will be similarly affected.

In short, the court's decision implies that much more care and service need to be provided first-hand at practices and games.

PHYSICALS PROVIDE CHANCE FOR DONOR REGISTRY

By Heather Dow
OLD DOMINION UNIVERSITY

The demographics of the nation's student-athletes make them a fertile potential source of bone-marrow donors, that, if tapped, could result in the saving of some of the 16,000 people diagnosed annually with leukemia, aplastic anemia and other potentially fatal blood diseases.

About 30 percent of those patients who can be treated by marrow transplantation find a donor from among relatives; the others must look outside their family. That search isn't always successful, especially for minorities.

National Marrow Donor Program (NMDP) is dedicated to helping the 70 percent who can't find help from relatives. Founded in 1987, the NMDP is a nonprofit organization that seeks to (1) develop an ethnically and racially diverse pool of volunteer donors; (2) promote donor safety, comfort, well-being and confidentiality; (3) participate in research concerning the clinical outcome of marrow transplants involving unrelated donors; and (4) promote equal and prompt access for all people needing marrow transplants from unrelated donors.

"The best of all possible worlds," according to Bob Pinderhughes, the NMDP director of communications and education, "would be that people see the need and value of the donor program even if they don't have a personal connection."

For the process to work, a prospective donor's tissue type, which is determined by heredity, must match the patient's. This is determined by a simple blood test.

The process includes obtaining a blood sample from the donor after the necessary paperwork is completed. The sample is sent to a laboratory to determine the tissue type, which is entered into the NMDP's computerized registry, which is then searched for patients in need. If the potential donor is a preliminary match, all of the donor's expenses are paid by the patient or the patient's medical insurance.

An ideal setting for finding potential donors among student-athletes would be the annual physical examinations many athletics departments conduct. At the time of those examinations, medical personnel could collect a blood sample if the student-athlete volunteered to participate. A successful effort would require cooperation and coordination between the athletics department and a donor center or local hospital for the collection of the samples and tissue-typing. The result would be the ongoing addition of a young and diverse group of individuals into the registry annually.

Although it's certainly the most beneficial, becoming a donor isn't the only way to help the NMDP. Support also could take the form of an athletics-department-sponsored fund-raiser for tissue-typing, for example. A program of NMDP's nature that seeks to help others regardless of age, race or socio-economic status can readily attract community support and sponsorship. In many cases, all that's needed is for someone to step forward and initiate a donor-recruitment or fund-raising campaign.

We in athletics, who often are in such visible roles, are in position to take that step. Many of us measure success by what

BIG TEN WRESTLERS' HIGH RATE OF SPIT TOBACCO USE POINTS TOWARD NEED FOR PRESEASON ORAL EXAMS

By Susan Hannam

SLIPPERY ROCK UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA

The rate of spit-tobacco use by Big Ten Conference wrestlers supports including oral examinations as part of preseason physical examinations, according to data gathered in a 1992 survey.

The study showed that conference wrestlers used spit tobacco at rates much higher than those reported for the general public and other college students.

A national survey of collegiate student-athletes conducted by researchers at Michigan State University in 1989 showed similar results. Those wrestlers were using spit tobacco at the same rate as tennis and football players but at a significantly higher rate than track and field and basketball student-athletes.

Oral examinations could prove beneficial because spit-tobacco users often develop a precancerous condition known as leukoplakia (white, wrinkled patches in the mouth), which can go undetected if not routinely checked for.

The Big Ten study used a self-report survey instrument. A total of 234 of the 300 wrestlers in the conference participated. A validation of self-reported use was done by sputum analysis with a selected team.

A total of 42 percent of the wrestlers had used some form of spit tobacco in the past year. Twenty-nine percent were current regular users who had used at least 100 times. Of that group, ninety-eight percent used moist snuff (finely ground tobacco placed between the lip and gum) and 1.5 percent used chewing tobacco (loose-leaf shredded tobacco). Moist snuff is far more carcinogenic than chewing tobacco.

The mean age of initiation of spit-tobacco use was 13.6 years (range six to 20 years). Of the current users, 53 percent had tried to quit at least once during the past year, while 35 percent had no intention of quitting in the next year.

The brands of moist snuff most popular with wrestlers (Kodiak, Skoal and Copenhagen) have concentrations of nitrosamines (cancer-causing substances) more than 100 times the level allowed by the Food and Drug Administration and the United States Department of Agriculture; however, tobacco companies are monitored by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, and don't have similar restrictions for their products.

Thirty-one percent of current users went through one can per week during the season, while 11 percent of that sample used more than five cans per week. Off-season rates ranged from 33 percent using less than one can per week to over 12 percent using more than five.

Eight percent of the 234 wrestlers said that their university had no drug-education program; 35 percent didn't know if such a program existed, and 57 percent indicated that their university had a program. Fifty-four percent said that their university had never presented a program on spit tobacco, while 20 percent said theirs had. Sixty-two wrestlers didn't respond.

Less than 14 percent of participating wrestlers had received an oral examination as part of their preseason physical examination. Of the regular users, 86 percent had never received an oral examination as part of their physical. Fourteen percent of the users self-reported experiencing leukoplakia where they held the tobacco. Nineteen percent of those wrestlers reported having sore, irritated gums.

The most common predictors of use were having smoked cigarettes, having received a free spit-tobacco sample and alcohol consumption. Less-dominant factors included approval of use by father, use by best friends, and belief that spit tobacco assists with weight reduction. The 1991 National Cancer Institute/National Institute of Dental Research Workshop cited the identification of such predictors as one of its priorities.

This study was unusual in that it compared the health beliefs of users and nonusers, who had significantly different opinions. One finding was that many more users believed that using spit tobacco assists with weight reduction. No studies have addressed this claim, which may be unique to wrestlers because of their need to meet weight classifications. This concern, along with other variables that strongly classify users, has a bearing on the development of an effective prevention-education program for these student-athletes.

While the findings of the study are specific only to Big Ten wrestlers, the results indicate that further research is needed to ascertain exact usage patterns and health beliefs among all varsity student-athletes.

Tobacco is extremely addictive — more than half (53 percent) of the users in the survey had unsuccessfully tried to quit in the previous year. Student-athletes who sincerely want to quit should have the knowledge of and access to support groups, programs, and treatment facilities to assist them in overcoming their habit.

Susan Hannam is codirector of the athletics training program at Slippery Rock. This study was conducted while she was completing her residency requirement at Indiana University, Bloomington. She acknowledges the support, cooperation and assistance of all the participating Big Ten athletics trainers, university team physicians and head wrestling coaches. Hannam may be called at 412/738-2794.

DRUG-TESTING CREW CHIEFS ENJOY THE EXPERIENCE

By Martin T. Benson

EDITOR

NCAA drug-testing crew chiefs are professionals (usually physicians or registered nurses) who administer the specimen-collection protocol at NCAA postseason events and on campuses through the NCAA's year-round drug-testing program, which began in 1986. Persons interested in serving as an NCAA crew chief should submit a resume to the NCAA sports sciences staff, which maintains a list of candidates for training.

John Johnston, an assistant athletics director and former wrestling coach at Princeton University, started as a crew chief four years ago after his term on the competitive-safeguards committee expired, because, he said, "it sounded like fun."

"I have always been very high on the NCAA and the type of work they do," he said. "After being on the committee, I was glad to have the opportunity to continue being affiliated with a good organization."

He said the toughest part of the job is rushing specimens to the airport, but the pluses far outweigh the minuses.

"It's not difficult work," he said. "It can be as interesting and fun as one wants to make it. If you want to be hard-nosed, you'll get the same kind of treatment."

The Penn State graduate, who began his athletics career as wrestling coach and athletics trainer at Thaddeus Stevens Trade School in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, said his favorite part of the job is returning to a site or championship he's worked before to renew acquaintances and getting to see NCAA championships.

Johnston

Dr. Eunice Larson, a practicing pathologist in Long Beach, California, has been a drug-testing crew chief since the program's inception in 1986, when former competitive-safeguards committee member Dr. Bill Bradford of Duke University asked her if she would do it.

"I had seen what damage street drugs could do at my daughter's school," she said. "At the time, I knew nothing about anabolic steroids but I was interested in fighting street drugs."

She said that her favorite part of being a crew chief is interacting with the student-athletes and getting to see the various campuses around the country.

The Washington State University graduate, who attended medical school at Washington University (Missouri) said that crew-chief work would be interesting to anyone with the proper qualifications, an interest in sports and the time to do it.

"You have to be flexible and be able to take vacation on short notice when you are needed," she said. "You get to see a lot of excellent tournaments, but it's very time-consuming."

As one of the first crew chiefs, she said she had to avoid television crews outside testing sites wherever she went during the initial year of testing, but that problem has waned.

Valerie Cox is a retired former director of nursing services at the University of Texas Health Center in Austin. She became a crew chief in the fall of 1988. One day Ali Nelson, a colleague of hers called and said she was coming to town to work at an NCAA championship. Nelson recommended Cox to director of sports sciences Frank D. Uryasz, and she has been working ever since.

"I like meeting the student-athletes, coaches and trainers," said the Great Britain native. "There's something invigorating about them. They're all unique. They're very focused, positive and upbeat."

Being a crew chief has turned her into a sports fan, particularly of track and field.

"I love it," she said. "Not a lot of people around Texas realize it but it is a great spectator sport."

She encouraged any qualified people to seriously consider becoming a crew chief.

"It's important to have professional people who can make sure the protocol is being adhered to," she said. "The key is protecting the athlete. I'd encourage any crew chief to open themselves to the athletes. It's a whole new world that few people get a chance to be an integral part of."

Cox is a proven recruiter. Her sister, Joyce Swinnea, joined the crew chief ranks after listening to her speak about the job.

Joyce Swinnea is in her 20th year as an advice and triage pediatric nurse in a Fairfax, Virginia, hospital. Now in her third year as a crew chief, Swinnea said she got her start when her sister Valerie (profiled above), said she ought to give it a try.

"I always do what she tells me," Swinnea joked, then added, on a more serious note, "I've enjoyed every minute of it."

She said her favorite part of the job is meeting the student-athletes and expanding her world.

"In the paper and on television you only see bad things about young people," she said. "These are great kids that I've met. I have no qualms about the future of this country being in the hands of these young men and women."

"You get to meet people you'd never otherwise meet — I'd never meet a football team anywhere else. I just worked the fencing championships. I normally wouldn't walk from here to across the road to watch fencing but it was another day of learning."

"It sure beats being a couch potato."

She also said she likes the chance to go to visit campuses she hasn't seen before, but that carries with it the only negative she can think of about the job — finding her way to the drug-testing site — but she said that's only a minor inconvenience.

VOLUNTARY WORKOUTS SHOULD BE MONITORED BY MEDICAL PERSONNEL TO INCREASE SAFETY

By Bernie DePalma
CORNELL UNIVERSITY

"Participation in sports requires an acceptance of risk of injury. Student-athletes rightfully assume that those who are responsible for the conduct of sport have taken reasonable precautions to minimize the risk of significant injury."

"The athletics program, via the athletics administrator, should be responsible for providing a safe environment. The student-athlete and the athletics program have a mutual need for an informed awareness of the risks being accepted and for sharing the responsibility for minimizing those risks."

(The 1993-94 NCAA Sports Medicine Handbook)

With the adoption of safety-exception legislation for eight NCAA sports, member institutions must take precautions to minimize potential injury by increasing their personnel's awareness of emergency procedures that must be applied to these voluntary workouts.

The intent of this legislation, which has been adopted in fencing, gymnastics, rifle, skiing, swimming and diving and, most recently, wrestling, is to increase safety by allowing the coach to be present during out-of-season voluntary individual workouts in the institution's regular practice facility.

Many of these workouts, however, occur late at night and on weekends when athletics trainers aren't available. During any situation when the coach is supervising a workout or practice, including those in nontraditional seasons, the coach becomes the primary emergency-care provider, although the risk of significant injury isn't reduced by his or her mere presence.

Consequently, each institution should review the NCAA Sports Medicine Handbook, Guideline 1A, "Sports Medicine Administration," with those working in its athletics department. This guideline clearly outlines several issues that should become a foundation for safe athletics programs, such as equipment and facility inspections, bleeding and emergency care. The NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports also strongly encourages athletics personnel (coaches and medical staff) to be certified in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR).

Administrators, coaches and medical staff must realize that there is additional responsibility associated with safety-exception legislation. Athletics departments must review and communicate their emergency procedures to their personnel. Even during times of budgetary constraints, athletics departments should consider the use of student athletics trainers and local emergency medical technicians ("EMTs") to provide medical on-site emergency coverage during these out-of-season practices. Coaches must communicate all workout and practice schedules to their medical staff, who should review emergency procedures with their coaches. Athletics trainers must accept the added responsibility of educating their coaches about medical procedures, with specific attention paid to coach-supervised workouts and practices. They must address this issue both immediately and continuously.

For example, due to the new wrestling legislation, when an athletics trainer is not on-site, wrestling coaches must become responsible for minimizing the risk of blood-borne pathogen transmission and will need to provide acute emergency treatment during workouts and practice sessions. This requires educating these coaches in Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) regulations and universal precautions (see the sports medicine handbook's Guideline 2H).

More importantly, in an emergency situation involving the head, neck or heart, every minute counts. An established plan may help save a life. It also may help avoid significant legal problems. (See Court Requires Proper Medical Precautions, page 2).

Reasonable precaution should be taken to minimize the risk of significant injury and provide a safe environment in college athletics. The competitive-safeguards committee encourages all athletics departments to establish safety- and emergency-care procedures for student-athletes, particularly during out-of-season workouts and practices.

Bernie DePalma is the head athletics trainer at Cornell and is a member of the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports.

only do it during their sport's season and not in the off-season," he said. "They already need to stop if they qualify for the championship, so if we can get them to stop during the regular season we could achieve total cessation for many."

The championships ban, now in its third year, seems to have worked. Violators are charged with misconduct, which, depending on the decision of the governing championships committee, is punished by one or more of nine sanctions listed in the general section of all NCAA championships handbooks. Those penalties can include, among other things, a public or private reprimand of the individual involved and withholding of the individual's per diem.

Harley W. Lewis, NCAA assistant director of championships, who keeps the national office's file for misconducts at all NCAA championships, said that in the early days of the rule, letters of reprimand were sent to offenders in baseball and football, but there hasn't been much of a problem with it recently.

Other sports organizations that ban tobacco use include Little League (baseball), which bans tobacco use by all participants, and the National Junior College Athletic Association, which prohibits tobacco use during regular-season and post-season games. The National Association for Intercollegiate Athletics bans tobacco products during postseason competition.

"Anybody with a tongue in their head should never get lost," she said.

A native of Great Britain, Swinnea came to the United States in 1953 after marrying a United States airman the year before. She worked as a labor and delivery nurse in Austin, Texas before moving to Northern Virginia.

Sue Diamond is in her eighth year working as a crew chief. She got her start through Wilford S. Bailey, then-faculty athletics representative at Auburn University, who was starting his term as NCAA president. He recommended Diamond, who taught health education full-time at the University and also served as academic advisor to Auburn student-athletes, to Frank D. Uryasz, NCAA director of sports sciences.

"At the time, most everyone was apprehensive about (drug testing) because it was so new," she said. "(To the public) it sounded like punishment.

"But it was something that needed to be done for the health and safety of the athletes and for the integrity of their sport."

She said she liked the idea of being able to make sure that those administering the tests as part of her crew were people who respected student-athletes and were competent in dealing with them.

One of the original members of her crew is her husband, Douglas, who is an environmentalist at Auburn.

She said meeting the student-athletes is her favorite part of the job.

"They're appreciative for the most part," she said. "I can count on one hand the ones I had who were uncooperative. Most see it as something that assures them of fair competition.

Diamond has been at Auburn for 20 years. After earning her three-year nursing degree at St. Luke's Hospital in Cleveland, Ohio, she earned both her bachelor's and master's degrees at Auburn, then began teaching.

She emphasized that education on a one-on-one basis, not only about drugs, but about nutrition, is an important part of a drug-testing crew's job.
